

Hello Mr. Martinez,

I am writing this e-mail to vote in favor of the ABA's recent proposal to make the LSAT test optional. I believe that the legal industry needs far more diversity and inclusion, especially from underrepresented groups who come from unprivileged backgrounds who cannot afford LSAT preparation from even lower-tier companies. In no way am I vehemently opposing the test in general. However, it has come to my knowledge that some of the most staunch supporters of dismissing the proposal are money hungry test companies. Odds are, only a select number of schools will go test optional if the proposal succeeds. There will be far more benefits to the unprivileged who seek a chance in the legal industry if the proposal goes through than the benefits that will be provided to a small number of individuals who are looking to make more profits annually if the proposal were to not go through. It's time to forge a new era where inclusion and diversity is put at the forefront of the ABA's values, and I strongly vote in favor of it.

Best,

Jason Strong
