

Hi,

I understand that I have missed the deadline to comment on the LSAT, however, it is worth the try as this is important for my future. I have taken the test 4 times now. I was an advanced student throughout college, so this makes no sense. The difficulty of this test is outrageous, not to mention the cost. I understand having a "standard test" for entry into school but this is not a "standard test." This test is made strictly to cancel out certain ethnics and not give everyone a chance as well as greed. I do believe this test should be removed as it does not properly detect how a student can or will succeed in Law School. It does, however, develop anxiety, poor judgement and financial shortage.

Thank you
