

Directory of Family Law Blogs

by Tonya Johnson (ABA Legal Technology Resource Center)

With the increasing popularity and awareness of blogs, this month we focus on family law practitioners who blog. A Blog, short for web log, is an Internet-based journal. “Blawgs” are blogs published by or for lawyers. Blogs are updated frequently by the author(s) with posts or postings. Most blogs have a space for comments by those who visit the blog, thus creating a dialogue between the blogger and the audience. Blogs usually include a Blogroll or listing of blogs that the blog owner likes or mentions. This creates reciprocity among bloggers and expands a blogger’s geographic boundaries, which due to our mobile society, can be particularly beneficial to a family lawyer.

My research revealed thirty-seven states with bloggers dedicated to the practice of family law. A number of states including (but not limited to) Alabama, California, Illinois, and Texas have several family law bloggers, while a number of states appear to have no one blogging on family law matters.

For those states in which I was unable to identify a family law blogger (Delaware, Hawaii, Idaho, Louisiana, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Dakota, South Dakota, Tennessee, Vermont, West Virginia, and Wyoming), I included links to state-specific divorce law resources provided by Cathy Meyer, Certified Divorce Coach and Legal Investigator. However, family law covers much more than just divorce, so if you know of a family law blog for the aforementioned states (or would just like to add yours to the list), please let us know. (Email glazerh@staff.abanet.org)

Please note: This directory is not intended to be exhaustive, and we will update the listing periodically. (We will also periodically send out updates of those blogs that we discover.) This directory will soon be posted in our Online Resource Center (<http://www.abanet.org/family>), so be sure to check it out.
