About the Authors

Thomas L. Daniels is a professor in the Department of City and Regional Planning at the University of Pennsylvania. He teaches courses on land use planning, environmental planning, and land preservation. He is also the director of the Certificate Program in Land Preservation. Tom is the co-author of Holding Our Ground: Protecting America's Farms and Farmland (Island Press, 1997) and several articles on agricultural land preservation. Tom holds a Ph.D. in Agricultural Economics from Oregon State University, an M.S. from the University of Newcastle (UK), and a B.A. from Harvard University. He was the director of the Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, Agricultural Preserve Board from 1989 to 1998. Tom has served as a consultant to state and local governments and land trusts and as a land trust board member.

John C. Keene is professor emeritus in the Department of City and Regional Planning at the University of Pennsylvania, where he teaches courses on land use law, environmental law, and strategies for sustainable development. He is the co-author of Saving American Farmland: What Works? (American Farmland Trust, 1997) and The Protection of Farmland: A Reference Guidebook for State and Local Governments (Washington, DC: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1981) and several articles on farmland protection and the legal issues that arise in the management of urban growth. John holds a J.D. from Harvard Law School, an M.C.P. from the University of Pennsylvania, and a B.A. from Yale University. He has served as a consultant to several local governments.