About the Authors

Professor James T. O’Reilly has published more than 40 texts in regulation and liability fields and authored more than 180 articles. He has taught at the University of Cincinnati College of Law for more than 30 years. He has lectured extensively on liability and regulation issues and formerly chaired the American Bar Association Section of Administrative Law and Regulatory Practice.

Jolene Sobotka of Cincinnati, Ohio, is a member of the Ohio and Iowa Bars and served until 2009 as legal counsel and later senior assistant director of the University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics. She has more than 20 years of experience counseling the management and staff of large hospital facilities.

Professor Philip Hagan teaches in the Department of Human Sciences at Georgetown University and is also a partner in the law firm of Marcari, Russotto, Spencer & Balaban, PC, specializing in personal injury. He has extensive experience in dealing with workplace, pedestrian, transportation, and construction-related safety issues, both domestically and internationally. In addition, he has investigated exposures to toxic chemicals, mold, and other environmental contaminants for more than 20 years. Currently, he is an editor and author of several texts, including the top-selling accident prevention books in the field, the National Safety Council’s Accident Prevention Manuals. Professor Hagan holds a JD from George Mason University School of Law, an MBA from Georgetown University’s McDonough School of Business, an MPH from George Washington University’s Medical School, and a BS from East Carolina University. He has bar and court affiliations with the Virginia Bar, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces, among others.