About the Authors

Jeffrey J. Brown is an advisor to senior management, law firms, project developers, and investors. He has successfully executed business plans within multiple energy industry segments including E&P, midstream, distribution, power generation, and energy management. Recently he has advised landowners and investors in shale issues and developers of midstream assets. He has been admitted as an expert witness before state regulatory agencies and the federal bankruptcy court. He has published articles covering exploration strategy production and has given numerous presentations on natural gas, energy trading and energy management before industry organizations, environmental advocates, and citizen associations.

Julia M. Carey is a director at Navigant Consulting, Inc. in Washington D.C. She is an energy economist. Her work includes oil, gas, and other energy-related industries. She routinely analyzes market dynamics and competition within energy markets as well as economic damages and valuations. She frequently provides expert testimony before regulators, courts, and arbitrators.

Brenda L. Clayton practices environmental, energy, and appellate law at Kelly Hart. Ms. Clayton handles regulatory matters and litigation arising from the exploration and production of oil, gas and other minerals. Ms. Clayton’s practice includes a concentration in appellate law, in which she handles suits for judicial review of agency decisions, as well as appeals from trial court judgments.

Benjamin J. Fosland is a founding member of Fosland Law Firm, PLLC, in Sco-bey, Montana. He focuses on representing land and mineral owners in connection with lease negotiations, surface use agreements, water rights issues, title defects, and other matters related to natural resource development. He has been published in the Idaho Law Review and is a former law clerk of Hon. David W. Gratton of the Idaho Court of Appeals. In his spare time, he likes to enjoy his native state’s northern prairies by hunting, fishing, and hiking with his dog, Maggie.
The Shale Energy Revolution: A Lawyer’s Guide

Basheer Y. Ghorayeb is a partner with Jones Day in Dallas, Texas. He is an experienced trial lawyer, representing energy clients in lawsuits, arbitrations, and government investigations. He has spent the last several years representing clients on disputes related to shale plays and other unconventional resources, including pipeline construction disputes, SEC investigations, and the first lawsuits arising from the Eagle Ford shale play.

Kenneth M. Klemm is a shareholder with Baker, Donelson, Bearman, Caldwell & Berkowitz, PC in New Orleans, Louisiana, and co-chair of the firm’s Oil and Gas Industry Service Team. In addition, Mr. Klemm serves as co-chair of the Energy Litigation Committee for the American Bar Association’s Section of Litigation. Mr. Klemm’s marine, energy, and oil and gas experience typically involves personal injury and property damage defense, breach of contract issues, blowouts and downhole well damage, and related insurance issues. His litigation experience includes white collar criminal cases, environmental and toxic tort issues, commercial disputes, intellectual property defense, and insurance litigation issues related to general property claims and maritime and oil and gas litigation.

Elizabeth E. Klingensmith is a partner with Haynes and Boone, LLP in Houston, Texas, with extensive experience litigating a broad range of oil and gas disputes related to working interest owners and operators, royalties, oil and gas leases, financial services, joint ventures, trade secrets, preferential rights, and oilfield remediation.

Robert Lang, CFA is a director in the Oil & Gas Disputes group in Navigant’s Disputes and Investigations practice. He routinely provides economic, financial, and accounting expertise in a wide variety of oil and gas disputes throughout the product life cycle, including royalty disputes, valuation/transaction issues, business interruptions, and contract disputes.
Michael A. Magee is an associate with Jones Day in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. His practice focuses on general business and tort litigation, primarily in relation to property disputes and oil and natural gas development. Mr. Magee’s representations include acquisitions by MLPs and counseling on matters related to pooling, unitization, land-use, rights to coalbed methane, and Pennsylvania’s historic title wash.

Kevin C. Meacham is an associate with Jones Day in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, where he focuses his practice on matters involving commercial disputes, energy, product liability, and insurance issues. Mr. Meacham’s representations include contract disputes, quiet title claims, and other emerging issues in the oil and gas arena.

Roy A. Powell is a partner with Jones Day in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, where his practice is devoted to complex commercial disputes and counseling, with an emphasis on construction industry and energy disputes. He is co-chair of Jones Day’s global construction group and has been involved in all facets of construction, energy, infrastructure, and petrochemical projects. Mr. Powell is a frequent author and speaker on construction, energy, and related infrastructure issues.

Chad M. Smith is an associate at Latham & Watkins LLP in Houston, Texas. He focuses his practice on domestic and international energy transactions, with a primary emphasis on mergers and acquisitions. His expertise includes acquisitions and divestitures of oil and gas assets, joint ventures and other strategic combinations in connection with the development of oil and gas assets, as well as drafting and negotiating joint use agreements, development agreements, joint operating agreements, exploration agreements, and other contracts relevant to the energy industry.

Elizabeth M. Varela is an associate at the Crowley Fleck PLLP law firm in Billings, Montana. Ms. Varela’s practice focuses on civil litigation, with an emphasis in natural resources litigation. She has been involved in several condemnation matters involving major pipeline projects. Ms. Varela graduated from the University of Virginia with undergraduate degrees in German and foreign affairs in 2004. She graduated magna cum laude from Gonzaga University School of Law in 2011, where she served as co-president of the Women’s Law Caucus, Treasurer of the Moot Court Honors Council, and associate editor of the Gonzaga Law Review.

Tyler L. Weidlich is a shareholder in the Baker, Donelson, Bearman, Caldwell & Berkowitz, PC New Orleans office, where he concentrates his practice in the areas of energy and general business litigation. His oil and gas litigation experience includes personal injury and property damage defense, blowouts, environmental contamination, and downhole well damage as well as royalty and mineral lease disputes.