Acknowledgments

No book is written in solitude, and this one benefited from contributions from an extraordinary group of scholar-practitioners who pushed past the discomfort of reaching beyond their disciplines to explore difficult questions. They all gave enormously of their time and energy, first by coming to the European Graduate School in Switzerland to participate in the Dancing at the Crossroads workshop and then in writing chapters based on their reflections and fields of practice. We thank them for their grace and dedication.

Rick Paszkiet of the American Bar Association and Daniel Bowling of the American Bar Association Publications Committee were quick to grasp the originality of the ideas in the book and to support the book as a useful innovation for the field of conflict resolution. We thank them for their vision, courage, and patience.

Internationally renowned dancer Margie Gillis caught our excitement about the potential of dance-connected work for conflict and inspired us throughout. She came to Switzerland with a myriad of original ideas and worked tirelessly to support everyone in the workshop to explore this new interface. Without her, the project would not have achieved this milestone. Margie is a deeply beloved friend and a dedicated supporter of this work; she has a heart for peace and the passion to inspire others to share it.

We very much appreciate the University of British Columbia faculty of law at Allard Hall for their support throughout the project. We especially thank Anna Holeton for invaluable assistance in obtaining the grant that supported the project. Gratitude also goes to Megan Coyle and Andrew Dilts of the faculty of law, who worked diligently and long, lending their talents and technical wizardry to the manuscript in ways that saved us hours and helped create a smooth process. Megan, Andrew, and Anna were unfailingly positive and were there when we most needed them. Emily Beausoleil, UBC PhD graduate in political science, and Andrew Dilts offered superb research and editorial assistance. For their hard work, patience, and ingenuity, we thank them very much.

We are also indebted to the European Graduate School. Its visionary leader, Dr. Paolo Knill, and his colleagues Drs. Margo Fuchs Knill and Stephen and Ellen Levine allowed us to use the beautiful Saas-Fee campus for the dance and conflict workshop that formed the basis of this book. Their generosity, creativity, and innovative leadership continue to inspire us and we are endlessly thankful for ongoing opportunities to collaborate.

We also want to acknowledge the support of the staff and newcomers at MOSAIC,¹ the Immigrant Services Society of British Columbia, Kinbrace, and CAUSE Canada who participated in and supported our workshops on arts-based approaches to intercultural conflict.

Thanks to our funders and supporters, the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada, the Margie Gillis Dance Foundation, MOSAIC, the University of British Columbia Hampton Fund, the University of British Columbia faculty of law at Allard Hall, and the European Graduate School, for generous assistance throughout the project. Together, they made possible what would otherwise have been impossible.

Our families supplied patience, kindness, and material support throughout the project; for this, our deep thanks.
