About the Contributors

Jenna Baddeley is a graduate student in social and clinical psychology at the University of Texas. She worked with Professor Lindahl and the Surviving Katrina and Rita in Houston Project.

Kristi Bowman is an Assistant Professor at the Michigan State University College of Law. She has clerked for the Eighth Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals, represented school districts in private practice at Franczek Sullivan, P.C. in Chicago, and worked for the U.S. Department of Education, Office of Civil Rights. Professor Bowman has numerous publications in the area of education and civil rights.

Meghan Butasek is the Director of the Office of Public Health Preparedness and Response for the Baltimore City Public Health Department. She earned a Masters in Public Health from the University of Virginia and is also a J.D. Candidate at the University of Maryland School of Law. She was a Piedmont CASA volunteer for over three years while working as a professional firefighter in Charlottesville, Virginia.

Howard Davidson, J.D., is the Director of the American Bar Association’s Center on Children and the Law, located in Washington, D.C. The Center provides technical assistance, training, and law, public policy, and social science research on a broad array of law and court-related topics affecting children. Mr. Davidson has worked in the field of child welfare law since 1974. He is the author or co-author of many books and articles on child protection legal issues.

Nicole Eugene is a Katrina survivor and a Surviving Katrina and Rita in Houston Project Interviewer. She serves as the Project Archivist.

Gerard F. Glynn is an Associate Professor of Law and Director of Clinical Programs at Barry University’s Dwayne O. Andreas School of Law. Prior to joining the faculty at Barry University, Professor Glynn was an Assistant Professor of Law and Director of Clinics at University of Arkansas at Little Rock School of Law (UALR). While at UALR, he helped develop a juvenile/family clinic, mental health clinic, and mediation clinic. Professor Glynn is the founding Executive Director of Florida’s Children First, a statewide child advocacy organization. Professor Glynn has focused his practice and his publications on children in the courts.

Sharon K. Hall is an Associate Professor of Psychology at the University of Houston, Clear Lake. Dr. Hall is a consultant to the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention and is a frequent presenter around the country. Her list of publications and reviews includes an extensive body of work in the area of children and child welfare. Dr. Hall studies trauma and resilience in children.

Danielle R. Holley-Walker is an Associate Professor of Law at the University of South Carolina School of Law. She has published articles on desegregation, affirmative action, race neutral admissions policies, and the federal No Child Left Behind program. She graduated from Yale College with a B.A. in History and from Harvard Law School. Before beginning her teaching career, Professor Holley-Walker practiced commercial litigation at Fulbright & Jaworski, LLP in Houston, Texas and clerked for Judge Carl E. Stewart, Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

David R. Katner is a Professor of Clinical Law and the Felix J. Dreyfous Teaching Fellow in Juvenile Law at Tulane University Law School. When he was in private practice, he worked as an indigent defender and handled general civil and criminal cases including several death penalty cases. He is on the Boards of the National Association of Counsel for Children and of the Children’s Bureau. He has served on the Board of Directors of the New Orleans Legal Assistance Corporation and the Jefferson Parish Juvenile Services Advisory Board. He is the faculty founder of the Tulane University Vietnamese Association, of Tulane’s Collegiate Organization for AIDS Prevention, and Tulane’s student chapter of the National Association of Counsel for Children. He has served as a member of the Louisiana Children’s Code Project and legal advisor to Covenant House in New Orleans. He sits as an ad hoc judge in Orleans Parish Juvenile Court. Professor Katner has authored numerous publications focusing on a range of juvenile related issues.

Carl Lindahl, Martha Gano Houston Research Professor at the University of Houston, is a Fellow of the American Folklore Society and an internationally recognized authority in medieval folklore, folk narrative, and folklore fieldwork. His book, Swapping Stories: Folktales from Louisiana, was named Louisiana Humanities Book of the Year by the Louisiana Endowment for the Humanities. He has received a Fulbright Distinguished Professorship as well as the American Folklore Society’s Alcée Fortier Award. Professor Lindahl is Co-Director of Surviving Katrina and Rita in Houston, a joint project of the Texas Commission on the Arts, the University of Houston, and the American Folklife Center at the Library of Congress, in which hurricane survivors receive training and pay to document the storm stories of fellow survivors.

Ellen Marrus is a George Butler Research Professor of Law at the University of Houston Law Center and the founder and co-director of the Center for Children, Law & Policy at the University of Houston Law Center. Professor Marrus received her B.A., from Kean College; her J.D. from the University of San Francisco; and her LL.M. from Georgetown Law Center. Professor Marrus concentrates her scholarship in the areas of children’s rights, professionalism, and clinical education. She is the author of numerous articles and has co-authored a casebook on juvenile law.
Victoria McFadden is a Folklore student at the University of Houston. She is also studying Creative Writing. She works with the Surviving Katrina and Rita in Houston project.

Susan Nash, Ph.D., is a research fellow in primary care at the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, Texas. She served as an advisor to the Surviving Katrina and Rita project.

Raymond T. Nimmer is the Dean of the University of Houston Law Center and Leonard Childs Professor of Law. He is one of the leading authorities on computer law in the world and the author of numerous books and articles. The Center for Children, Law & Policy was created under his administration at the University of Houston Law Center, and he has been a critical supporter of the Center’s efforts.

Charles J. Ogletree is the Jesse Climenko Professor of Law and the Director of the Charles Hamilton Houston Institute for Race and Justice at Harvard Law School. Professor Ogletree has authored numerous books and scholarly articles on race matters and the criminal justice system. Prior to become a faculty member at Harvard Law, Professor Ogletree was a public defender in Washington, D.C.

Laura E. Oren is a Law Foundation Professor of Law at the University of Houston Law Center and the Co-Director of the Center for Children, Law & Policy. Professor Oren has a Ph.D. in British history from Yale University and a J.D. from the University of Houston Law Center. Her dissertation was about the origins of the welfare state in England and the problems of poverty that those beginnings left untouched. After graduation, she was in private practice, specializing in civil rights (Section 1983) law and appellate work. Professor Oren is the author of numerous articles on constitutional rights, women’s rights, family law, child welfare, and adoption.

Augustina Reyes is a Professor of Educational Leadership and Cultural Studies at the University of Houston College of Education. Professor Reyes uses legal policy and qualitative research methods in her extensive publications on topics such as Zero Tolerance, Urban School Leadership, and Urban School Behavioral Policies, Language Issues, and Race Issues.

Anna Williams Shavers is a Professor of Law at the University of Nebraska College of Law. She received an M.S. in Business from the University of Wisconsin-Madison and her J.D. degree from the University of Minnesota. Her primary teaching and research interests are in the area of immigration and its intersection with gender issues. She also teaches education law and has served as a consultant on school finance issues.

Shari Smothers received a B.A. in Social Work from Southern University at New Orleans. Hurricane Katrina caused her to evacuate to Houston where she has worked as an interviewer for the Surviving Katrina and Rita in Houston project and as the project’s Archivist and sound editor.
H. Thomas Wells ("Tommy"), Jr., is the President of the American Bar Association. He is a partner and founding member of Maynard, Cooper & Gale in Birmingham, Alabama. He is co-chair of the ABA's Special Committee on Disaster Response, which was commissioned after the devastation of Hurricane Katrina.