Medical Malpractice
Avoiding, Adjudicating, and Litigating in the Challenging New Climate

About the Authors

PROFESSOR JAMES T. O’REILLY teaches in the College of Medicine and the College of Law of the University of Cincinnati, and has published 45 texts and 200 articles on issues of safety, health and regulation. His work has been quoted by the U.S. Supreme Court and many appellate courts. He is a graduate of Boston College and the University of Virginia School of Law.

MICHELE YOUNG is a graduate of McGill University and Georgetown Law Center. She served as a law clerk to three federal judges, including the late Hon. George Edwards Jr. of the U.S. Court of Appeals of the Sixth Circuit, and taught at the University of Dayton Law School and Salmon P. Chase College of Law. She has written for the law and the media, including “Medical Malpractice Considerations Under PPACA” in the Healthcare Rulemaking Guide (2011), edited by James T. O’Reilly. A 2014 recipient of the Cincinnati Political Women’s Caucus Achievement Award, Ms. Young leads Civic and Community Affairs at Gregory S. Young, Co., L.P.A. where she provides cutting-edge legal analysis, strategies, and advocacy. She lives in Cincinnati with her husband and five children.