Occurrences

SETH LAMDEN

I. CGL Policies Cover Fortuitous Losses
II. CGL Policies Cover Property Damage and Bodily Injury Caused by an “Occurrence”
III. Subjective versus Objective Perspective: Evaluating the “Occurrence” from the Reasonable Person Standard
   A. Many Courts Apply a Subjective Standard When Determining Whether There Has Been an “Occurrence”
      1. In Certain Circumstances, Courts Apply an Objective Standard to Determine Whether There Has Been an “Occurrence”
      2. Intentional Acts of the Insured That Cause Unintended and Unexpected Damage or Injury May Be an “Occurrence”
      3. Intentional Misconduct of a Third Party Can Be an Occurrence So Long as It Was Neither Expected nor Intended by the Insured
   B. Faulty Workmanship and Product Defects Can Constitute an “Occurrence”
      1. Some Courts Hold That Unexpected and Unintended Property Damage Caused by Defective Work Is the Result of an “Occurrence”
      2. Some Courts Hold That Unexpected and Unintended Property Damage Caused by Defective Work Is the Result of an “Occurrence” Only If the Property That Is Damaged Is Not the Work or Product of the Insured
      3. Unexpected and Unintended Damage to the Work or Product of a Third Party Caused by Defective Work or Products May Be the Result of an “Occurrence”
4. A Minority of Courts Hold That Even Accidental Damage to the Work or Property of a Third Party Is Not the Result of “Occurrence” When the Damage Arises Out of the Insured’s Faulty Work or Products 87
5. Some State Statutes Specify That Defective Construction Constitutes an “Occurrence” 88
C. The Causes of Action against the Insured Should Not Control Whether Property Damage or Bodily Injury Was Caused by an “Occurrence” 89
