

About the Author

Since 1973, Mr. Schlicher has specialized in patent litigation, licensing, and related antitrust matters while practicing with major patent and general firms in New York and California, including Fish & Neave, Townsend and Townsend, and one biotechnology company, Genentech. He has represented clients in the biotechnology, pharmaceutical, diagnostics, medical device, chemical, scientific instrument, computer, computer components, semiconductor, semiconductor equipment, audio recording, and other industries. He now works with companies and law firms on these matters and assists companies in resolving patent actions and other disputes. Mr. Schlicher serves as an expert on patents, damages, and licensing. He serves as a mediator in the ADR program of the United States District Court for the Northern District of California.

Mr. Schlicher is the author of three other books, Patent Law: Legal and Economic Principles (West Group 1992, 2nd ed. 2003); Licensing Intellectual Property, Legal, Business and Market Dynamics (John Wiley & Sons 1996) (a book on the law and economics of patent licensing and U.S. antitrust and misuse limits on licensing); and Licensing Intellectual Property (John Wiley & Sons 1999) (a book on limits on licensing imposed by antitrust and competition authorities in the United States, the European Union, and Japan). He is the principal author of Chapter VIII, “Antitrust Issues Involving Intellectual Property: Patents, Copyrights, Trademarks and Trade Secrets,” in Antitrust Law Developments (Second) (ABA 1983), and the author of “Antitrust and Related Constraints on Patent Licensing Strategy,” in Inside the Minds: Antitrust Law Deal Strategies (Aspatore Books 2007). Mr. Schlicher is also the author of 21 articles on a variety of patent topics. His books and articles have been relied on by the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, and various district courts.¹ He received the Joseph Rossman Memorial Award from the Patent and Trademark Office Society in 2001 and again in 2009 as the author of the most influential article in those years in the fields of patents, trademarks, and copyrights.

Mr. Schlicher has taught patent law as a lecturer at Stanford Law School and teaches licensing strategy at the School of Law, University of California, Berkeley (formerly Boalt Hall). He has testified at hearings on patent issues conducted by the United States Patent and Trademark Office, the Senate Judiciary Committee, and the Federal Trade Commission. He has spoken at conferences and meetings held by the American Arbitration Association, the American Bar Association, the American Conference Institute, the American Intellectual Property Law Association, the Conference Board, the National Bureau of Economic Research, the Practising Law Institute, the San Francisco Intellectual Property Law Association, the Science and Technology Advisory Board of the National Academy of Sciences, and Stanford Law School.

He received his law degree from Stanford Law School and graduated from Northwestern University with highest distinction, majoring in chemistry. He received the Marple-Schweitzer Award given by the Northwestern University Chemistry Department. Some of his chemistry research is published in the Journal of Organic Chemistry. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Lambda Upsilon (the national chemistry honorary society), and Sigma Xi (the national experimental science honorary society).
