Contents

About the Authors ix
Praise for... xi
Acknowledgments xix
To Our Readers: A Note on Our Use of Language xxiii
Our Definition of a Parent xxiii
Our Definition of a Couple xxiii
A Few Words on Our Use of Pronouns xxiv
Introduction xxv

PART 1 A NEW PERSPECTIVE ON OUR WORK: THE ELEMENTS OF SUCCESSFUL OUTCOMES IN SEPARATION AND DIVORCE 1

Chapter 1 Divorce Reimagined as a Developmental Experience 3
What Do We Mean by “Development”? 4
Divorce as a Developmental Crisis 7
Summary of Concepts From Chapter 1 9

Chapter 2 Conditions for Positive Change 11
The Human Relationship to Change 11
The Three Conditions for Positive Change 13
A new idea 14
A Helping Relationship 15
Optimal Anxiety 25
Chapter 3 Understanding Our Clients

Why Developing an Understanding of Our Clients’ Emotional Dynamics is Important for Our Work
- Maintaining Empathy
- Gaining a Realistic Sense of Your Client’s Strengths and Limitations
- Assessing Transformative Capacity
- Developing Shared Understanding
- Avoiding Falling into Counterproductive Modes of Advocacy
- Having Realistic Expectations of Ourselves, Our Clients, and Our Process

How Personality Develops: The Impact of Bad Childhood Experiences
- Emotional Defenses

Understanding Mental Health and Ill Health
- A Model of Emotional Health and Ill Health: The Rigidity/Flexibility Continuum

A Few Words on Attachment in Divorce Work
- Secure Attachment
- Insecure Attachment: Ambivalent, Avoidant, Disorganized

Chapter 4 Introduction to the Professional Container

The Two-Part Container

PART 2 APPLYING OUR UNDERSTANDING TO OUR WORK WITH CLIENTS

Chapter 5 The First Step in Establishing the Container: Our One-on-One Relationship with Our Client

Ask Yourself: “When Does the Helping Relationship Begin?”
- Offer Curiosity Without Judgment
- Learn to Notice
Maintain Presence of Mind 78
Conduct a Nondirective Interview 79
Deciding How to Begin 82
  Tips for Conducting the Nondirective Interview 83
  What to Do When Your Client Doesn't Say Anything 84
  What to Do When Your Client Seems Overwhelmed and Disorganized 85
  Follow the Affect, Not the Content 87
  Listen for What the Client Doesn't Say 89
Provide Structure in the Holding Environment 90
  Fees 90
  Deadlines 91
  Time 91
  Limits and Boundaries 91
Minimize Self-Disclosure 92
Maintain a Stance of “Involved Impartiality” 93
Don’t Say Anything You Don’t Feel 96
Eschew Premature Pep Talks 97
Don’t Say Anything Your Client isn’t Ready to Hear (Even if it’s True) 98
Don’t Ask Rhetorical Questions 99
Summary of Concepts from Chapter 5 100

Chapter 6  The Second Step in Establishing the Container: Process Guidelines and Relationships among Colleagues 101
The Role of Microcontainers in the Macrocontainer 103
Viva La Difference! Examining the Containers Across Disciplines 109
The Risks of an Expanded Macrocontainer 111
Aggression Against the Macrocontainer 112
Rupture and Repair in the Macrocontainer 113
  Mark and Roberta: Rupture and Repair in the Macrocontainer 113
Summary of Concepts from Chapter 6 119

Chapter 7  The Importance of Self-Awareness 121
Being in Sync 121
Staying in Sync 122
Turning Potential Obstacles into Opportunities for Growth 124
Useful Concepts for Describing and Understanding the Impact of Our Internal Obstacles to Change 126
Transference and Countertransference 126
Personal Biases and Assumptions 128
The Interplay of Professional Experience and Bias 130
Being Triggered 131
Mindfulness: The Key to Staying in Sync 133
Mindfulness as a Navigational Tool 134
Finally, Make Friends with Your Ghosts 135
Summary of Concepts from Chapter 7 137

Chapter 8 What Should I Do? What Should I Say? Factors to Consider in the Moment 139
Anticipating the Moment 141
Choosing an Intervention in “Ordinary Moments” 143
Choosing an Intervention in Developmentally Important Moments 143
Seven Factors to Consider when Choosing what to Do or Say in a Given Moment 145
Factor 1: Topical Context 145
Factor 2: Temporal Context 146
Factor 3: Intrapersonal Context 146
Factor 4: Interpersonal Context 146
Factor 5: Recent or Impending Occurrence Context 147
Factor 6: The State of the “Two-Part” Container 148
Factor 7: The Developmental Task Context 149
Summary of Concepts from Chapter 8 152

Chapter 9 Facilitating Positive Change: The Essence of Technique 153
Linking Developmental Theory to Technique: The Tending/Moving Continuum 154
Navigating the Tension Between Tending and Moving: Four Categories of Technique 157
Category 1: Acknowledge Emotions Internally (to Yourself) 157
Category 2: Acknowledge Emotions Nonverbally (to Another Person/s) 158
Category 3: Acknowledge Emotions Verbally and Open a Space to Explore 158
Category 4: Acknowledge Emotions Verbally, then Move On 159

The Well-Equipped Divorce Professional’s Toolbox of Essential Techniques 159
Techniques that are Effective with Every Client 159
Techniques that are Effective with Flexible Clients 171

A Word About Mistakes 182
Finally, We Want to Leave You with This . . . 182
Summary of Concepts from Chapter 9 182

Conclusion 185
Beyond Competence: Tuning Our Professional Instrument 185
Competence and the “Right” Professional for the Job 186
Intuition, Attunement, and “Matching” 192
What Does “Matching” Look Like in the Room? 193
Beyond Competence 196

Appendix A 199
Glossary of Helpful Terms and Phrases 199

Appendix B 219
Using this Book for Ongoing Learning: Supplemental Study Modules 219
Supplemental Study Modules 219
Modules 220

Chapter 1: Divorce Reimagined as a Developmental Experience 220
Chapter 2: Conditions for Positive Change 221
Chapter 3: Understanding Our Clients 227
Chapter 4: Introduction to the Professional Container 232
Chapter 5: The First Step in Establishing the Container: Our One-on-One Relationship with Our Client 234
Chapter 6: The Second Step in Establishing the Container: Process Guidelines and Relationships among Colleagues 236
Chapter 7: The Importance of Self-Awareness 238
Chapter 8: What Should I Do? What Should I Say? Factors to Consider in the Moment 245

Chapter 9: Facilitating Positive Change: The Essence of Technique 250

Conclusion 254