

Acknowledgments

The authors would like to thank our wonderful peer reviewers:

Debbie Foster, Partner at Affinity Consulting Group, who saw this book through from beginning to end, always with an eye towards what really matters to our readers based on her decades of experience in improving law office profitability, technology and function. Debbie – we could not have done this without you.

Professor Carrie Queenan of the Darla Moore School of Business at the University of South Carolina, whose wealth of knowledge in engineering, systems, and management science - and explication of Little's Law – tied our systems chapters together. Carrie – thanks for your patience (and gentle mathematical corrections)!

The authors would also like to thank the great people at Lachina Publishing who made this book possible (and dragged us across the finish line) including Jenni Claydon, Morgan Ewald, and Molly Montanaro. Thanks also to Lauren Thompson of the American Bar Association for helping us get the book to market, and finally to Lisa Pansini at Rocket Matter for her great graphic design eye – and 11th hour illustrations.

Dave Maxfield would also like to thank Kristen Maxfield for her patience and support as I worked on this book on vacations, at home (and in the end everywhere) and his grandfather, Wayne C. Smith, MD, his father D. Richard Maxfield, and his law partner of 17 years, Gene Trotter, all of whom taught me that knowledge is meant to be shared, and to never stop learning.

Larry Port would like to thank Dina Roth Port for being an inspiration as a published author and an amazing, understanding wife. And Samantha and Zachary, who gave up time with their father to work on this book. Thank you also to Neil and Mickey Port for raising me to appreciate education, to think big, and for their unlimited love and support. And big thanks to all of my teachers along the way who pushed me to write, especially Edna Neely.
