

About the Authors

Stacy D. Heard, JD, is a family law solo practitioner in Seattle, Washington, where she has served clients for more than 20 years. She serves on the governing council in the Family Law Section of the American Bar Association. She is also the International Law Committee Chair for the ABA Family Law Section. She is a fellow in the International Academy of Family Lawyers (IAFL). She is also a member of the Association of Family and Conciliatory Courts (AFCC) U.S. and Australian chapters and a past president of the Washington State AFCC chapter (WA-AFCC). Her family law practice includes cases involving high-conflict parenting/custody, international custody disputes, the Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction, relocation, complex financial issues, restraining orders, and child support. Stacy is trained in cross-border mediation, arbitration, mediation, collaborative law, and as a guardian ad litem. She is the author of Washington Family Law (LexisNexis Practice Guide, 2019). Stacy is a frequent speaker on parenting plans in the state of Washington, nationally, and internationally.

Jennifer Wheeler, PhD, received her doctorate in clinical psychology from the University of Washington, completing both pre- and post-doctoral training in criminal and civil forensic evaluation and treatment. She has published numerous articles and chapters on a variety of topics, including forensic psychology, sexual behavior, abuse/violence, and couple therapy. She has served as president of the Washington Association for the Treatment of Sexual Abusers (WATSA) and president of WA-AFCC. Jennifer maintains a private practice in clinical and forensic psychology in Seattle, Washington.