

---

About the Editors

Michael B. Gerrard is Andrew Sabin Professor of Professional Practice at Columbia Law School, and founder and Faculty Director of the Sabin Center for Climate Change Law. He is a member and former chair of the faculty of the Columbia Earth Institute, and of the American Bar Association's Section of Environment, Energy, and Resources. From 1979 through 2008 he practiced environmental law full time in New York, most recently as partner in charge of the New York office of Arnold & Porter, handling litigation, transactions, and regulatory compliance. He is author or editor of 13 books on environmental law.

Jody Freeman is the Archibald Cox Professor of Law at Harvard Law School, and a leading scholar of environmental and administrative law. She established the Law School's Environmental Law Clinic and its Environmental and Energy Law Research Program. Freeman served as Counselor for Energy and Climate Change in the Obama White House and worked for the Biden transition team developing the administration's climate action plan. Ms. Freeman is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, a Fellow of the American College of Environmental Lawyers, and a member of the Council on Foreign Relations. She is an independent director on the board of ConocoPhillips, an oil and gas producer.

Michael Burger is the Executive Director of the Sabin Center for Climate Change Law and a Senior Research Scholar at Columbia Law School. He is co-author of Urban Climate Law (Columbia University Press, forthcoming), and editor of Combating Climate Change with Section 115 of the Clean Air Act: Law and Policy Rationales (Edward Elgar, 2020) and Climate Change, Public Health and the Law (Cambridge University Press, 2018). He is a Fellow and Regent of the American College of Environmental Lawyers, and serves on the Advisory Council of the Institute at Brown for Environment and Society.

---

About the Contributors

Carrie Apfel is Senior Attorney in the Sustainable Food and Farming Program at Earthjustice. Her practice focuses on creating a more climate-friendly, resilient, environmentally sound, and just agricultural system. Prior to joining Earthjustice, she was a litigation partner at Jenner & Block.

Amanda Shafer Berman is vice chair of Crowell & Moring's Environmental and Natural Resources Group and co-leads the firm's appellate practice. She has argued over 20 cases in the courts of appeals, including many climate and clean air matters. Amanda spent ten years at the Justice Department, where she defended the Clean Power Plan before the D.C. Circuit.

Sara Bronin is a professor of planning and law at Cornell University specializing in property, land use, historic preservation, and climate change. Among other public service, she founded the National Zoning Atlas and Desegregate Connecticut and serves as an advisor to the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

Alejandro E. Camacho is Chancellor's Professor of Law, Associate Dean for Faculty Research and Development, and Faculty Director of the Center for Land, Environment, and Natural Resources at the University of California, Irvine School of Law. He is on the Board of Directors and a Member-Scholar at the Center for Progressive Reform.

Elizabeth B. Dawson is a counsel in the Environment & Natural Resources Group in Crowell & Moring's Washington, D.C. office, a leader of the firm's ESG working group, and a former trial attorney at the Environment and Natural Resources Division, U.S. Department of Justice.

John C. Dernbach is Commonwealth Professor of Environmental Law and Sustainability at Widener University Commonwealth Law School, and is director of the School's Environmental Law and Sustainability Center. He is co-editor, with Michael Gerrard, of Legal Pathways to Deep Decarbonization in the United States (2019).

Sheila R. Foster is the Scott K. Ginsburg Professor of Urban Law and Policy at Georgetown. She holds a joint appointment with the Georgetown Law School and the McCourt Public Policy School. Professor Foster writes in the areas of property, land use, environmental justice, and local government law.

---

Tracy Hester is an Associate Instructional Professor at the University of Houston Law Center, where he teaches environmental law, climate change, and statutory interpretation courses. Hester is an elected member of the American Law Institute, the American College of Environmental Lawyers, and the American Bar Association's Task Force on Climate Change.

Rachel A. Jones is a native of Northeastern Pennsylvania. She graduated from King's College McGowan School of Business with a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration ranked first in her major, Business Management. She currently attends Widener Commonwealth Law School and is a 2023 Juris Doctorate candidate.

Sam Kalen is the William T. Schwartz Distinguished Professor of Law and Associate Dean at the University of Wyoming College of Law. His scholarship focuses on energy, environment, public lands, and natural resources law. He has co-authored Energy Follies; Natural Resources Law and Policy and the ABA's Endangered Species Act: Basic Practice Series.

Alice Kaswan is a Professor of Law at the University of San Francisco School of Law. She is a climate policy expert, whose research focuses on climate justice in mitigation and adaptation policies and on federalism.

Alexandra B. Klass is the James G. Degnan Professor of Law at the University of Michigan Law School. She teaches and writes primarily in the areas of energy law, natural resources law, and environmental law. Prior to entering academia, she was a partner at Dorsey & Whitney LLP in Minneapolis.

Kate Konschnik is Principal Deputy Assistant Attorney General for the Environment and Natural Resources Division, U.S. Department of Justice. Kate began her legal career in ENRD, and then served as Environmental Counsel in the U.S. Senate. Kate has done climate policy work and taught at Harvard and Duke Law Schools.

Peter Lehner is Managing Attorney of Earthjustice's Sustainable Food and Farming Program. From 2007 to 2015, Lehner was the Executive Director of the Natural Resources Defense Council and from 1999 to 2006 led the Environmental Protection Bureau for the New York Attorney General.

Thomas Lorenzen is co-chair of Crowell & Moring's Environment & Natural Resources practice. For ten years, at the Department of Justice, Tom oversaw the defense of all EPA rulemakings, including many seminal climate cases. Tom is ranked by Chambers as one of four best climate change lawyers in the U.S.

---

Robert J. Meyers is a partner with Crowell & Moring LLP. He previously served as Acting Assistant Administrator for Air and Radiation at EPA, and as Deputy Chief Counsel for Energy and Environment with the Energy and Commerce Committee of the U.S. House of Representatives.

Brent Murcia has a BA in environmental studies from Carleton College and a JD from the University of Minnesota Law School, and has clerked for Chief Judge Susan L. Segal and Judge Jeffrey M. Bryan at the Minnesota Court of Appeals. He has worked on climate-related issues in a variety of roles.

Shantal Pai has a BS in Plant Sciences and a JD from the University of Minnesota Law School in 2021. She clerked for Judge Nancy Brasel at the U.S. District Court and Chief Justice Lorie Gildea at the Minnesota Supreme Court. She has worked as a climate scientist in a variety of capacities.

Chiara Pappalardo is Doctor of Juridical Science Candidate and International Economic Law Fellow at Georgetown University Law Center. She conducts research and writes in the areas of energy law, environmental law, sustainability, and climate change.

Nathan A. Rosenberg is a visitor scholar at the Harvard Law School Food Law and Policy Clinic. His research focuses on agriculture, labor, and the environment.

Jim Rossi is Judge D.L. Lansden Chair in Law at Vanderbilt University. He has written extensively on legal issues related to energy transitions and is a founding coauthor of a leading energy law casebook, Energy, Economics and the Environment (Foundation Press, 5th edition 2020).

J.B. Ruhl is the David Daniels Allen Distinguished Chair of Law at Vanderbilt University Law School, where he also serves as Co-director of the Energy, Environment, and Land Use Program.

Mark Squillace is the Raphael Moses Professor of Natural Resources Law at the University of Colorado Law School. His teaching and research focus on environmental and natural resources law and policy. Squillace is a former Fulbright scholar who writes on water resources, public lands, and natural resources law and policy.

Hana Vizcarra is a senior attorney at Earthjustice working on national climate matters. She previously analyzed federal regulatory policy and private sector responses to climate change at Harvard Law's Environmental & Energy Law Program, and practiced environmental law at two firms.

---

Romany M. Webb is an associate research scholar at Columbia Law School and senior fellow at the Sabin Center for Climate Change Law. She was previously a clinical instructor at the University of Texas Law School. Her research focuses primarily on legal tools to mitigate the climate impacts of energy development and enhance the climate resilience of energy infrastructure.

Jessica Wentz is a Non-Resident Senior Fellow at the Sabin Center for Climate Change Law, Columbia Law School. She previously worked as a Visiting Associate Professor at the George Washington University Law School. Her current research focuses on the role of climate science in lawmaking and litigation.

David Wirth is a Professor of Law and former Director of International Programs at Boston College Law School. Previously he was Attorney-Adviser, Office of the Legal Adviser of the U.S. State Department, with principal responsibility for all international environmental issues.

Hannah Wiseman is Professor of Law; Professor and Wilson Faculty Fellow in the College of Earth and Mineral Sciences; and Co-funded Faculty—Institutes of Energy and the Environment at the Pennsylvania State University—University Park.