

About the Contributors

Editor

Claire L. Parins is the Senior Director of Academic Publications at the University of Chicago Law School. She was the former Director of Periodicals at the American Bar Association (ABA) and is currently an editorial board member of Human Rights, a magazine published by the Section of Civil Rights & Social Justice. She was a staff attorney at the Shriver Center on Poverty Law and editor of its flagship Clearinghouse Review, a national poverty law journal, and one of the first directors of content at Illinois Legal Aid Online.

Authors and Contributors

Richard C. Auxier is a senior policy associate in the Urban-Brookings Tax Policy Center. His work focuses on state and local tax policy, budgets, and other finance issues. Before joining Urban, he was on the staff of the DC Tax Revision Commission and a researcher and editor at the Pew Research Center. He attended the University of Maryland for his undergraduate degree and his master's degree in public policy.

Emily Bergeron is an Associate Professor at the University of Kentucky. Her work focuses on the connections between environmental justice, cultural resource protection, sustainable development, resiliency planning, and affordable housing. She is a Vice-chair of the ABA's Environmental Justice Committee, an editorial board member of Human Rights, and a Co-editor of Preservation Education & Research. She holds a PhD in City and Regional Planning from Cornell University and a JD from the University of Florida.

The Honorable Anna Blackburne-Rigsby has served for twenty-eight years as a judge on both the trial court level and appellate level of the DC Courts. For the past seventeen years, she has served on District of Columbia's highest local court, the DC Court of Appeals. She became the Chief Judge in 2017. Previously, she worked in the DC Attorney General's Office and in private practice at the law firm of Hogan Lovells. She is President-Elect of the National Conference of Chief Justices. She was assisted in the research and drafting of this article by Julie Zuckerbrod, Esq., law clerk to her for the 2021–2022 term.

Alan Butler is Executive Director of the Electronic Privacy Information Center (EPIC), a nonprofit advocacy center in Washington, DC, that works to secure the fundamental right to privacy in the digital age. He has spent more than a decade litigating privacy cases and engaging with policymakers on emerging privacy issues. He also serves as the Co-chair of the Privacy and Information Protection Committee of the ABA Section on Civil Rights and Social Justice.

Logan S. Casey is the Senior Policy Researcher and Advisor at the Movement Advancement Project. Previously, he was a Research Associate for the Harvard Opinion Research Program (HORP) at the Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health. He earned his PhD in political science from the University of Michigan–Ann Arbor and now lives in St. Louis, Missouri.

Michelle Kanter Cohen is currently Policy Director and Senior Counsel at Fair Elections Center and has spent more than a decade focused on nonpartisan advocacy and litigation to remove barriers to voting and make voting more accessible for all Americans, particularly those from historically marginalized communities. In her personal capacity, she also served on the Montgomery County (Maryland) Right to Vote Task Force and is a member of the ABA's Standing Committee on Election Law.

Robert D. Dinerstein is professor of law and director of the Disability Rights Law Clinic at American University, Washington College of Law. He has focused on issues of consent, supported decision making, and the Americans with Disabilities Act. He is Chair of the ABA's Commission on Disability Rights and Co-chair of the Disability Rights Committee of the Section of Civil Rights and Social Justice. He has an AB from Cornell and a JD from Yale Law School.

Vincent A. Eng is a partner at the VENG Group. He is a nationally recognized expert on the Senate confirmation process, and he has led the lobbying and public relations efforts on the confirmation of over 100 judicial and executive branch nominees. He has taught law school for over twenty years, most recently at Columbia Law School. He has written and edited over ten books—including a law school casebook on sanctions, sentencing, and corrections.

Richard T. Foltin is a Fellow for Religious Freedom at the Freedom Forum and is a special counsel to the ABA Section of Civil Rights and Social Justice and Co-chair of the Section's Religious Freedom Committee. He has written and spoken extensively on civil rights and civil liberties issues, including delivery of testimony before congressional committees on workplace religious discrimination. He is a native of New York City, a child of Holocaust survivors, and a graduate of New York University and Harvard Law School.

Nicole B. Godfrey is an Associate Clinical Professor of Law at Michigan State University (MSU) College of Law. Before moving to MSU, she taught in the Civil Rights Clinic at the University of Denver (DU) Sturm College of Law where she litigated a class action challenging Colorado's response to COVID-19 in its prisons. She researches on the law of incarceration and holds a BA from Boston University (BU) and an MA, JD, and LLM from DU.

Naomi Goldberg is deputy director of the Movement Advancement Project (MAP). She also serves as MAP's LGBTQ Program Director. For fifteen years, she has worked to advance LGBTQ data inclusion and leverage data to speed equality for LGBTQ people. She completed a policy fellowship at the Williams Institute at University of California, Los Angeles (UCLA) School of Law. She has a Master of Public Policy from the Ford School at the University of Michigan and graduated from Mount Holyoke College.

Danielle C. Jefferis is an Assistant Professor of Law at the University of Nebraska College of Law. Her research focuses on the law and policy governing prison and detention. During the pandemic, she represented a group of experts as amici curiae urging federal courts around the country to impose measures in prisons and jails to protect the people confined inside. She earned her JD from Georgetown Law and her BA from New York University.

Kevin R. Johnson is Dean, Mabie-Apallas Professor of Public Interest Law, and Professor of Chicana/o Studies at University of California (UC) Davis School of Law. He joined the UC Davis law faculty in 1989 and was named Associate Dean for Academic Affairs in 1998. He became Dean in 2008. A magna cum laude graduate of Harvard Law School, where he served as an editor of the Harvard Law Review, he earned an AB in economics from UC Berkeley, graduating Phi Beta Kappa.

Olivia Kohrs is a managing attorney at the Colorado Poverty Law Project (CPLP), a non-profit organization that provides pro bono aid to individuals facing housing instability. Her practice focuses on education and outreach to promote access to justice, and she coordinates the organization's pro bono volunteer network which matches tenants with volunteer attorneys. Before joining CPLP, she was a civil rights attorney at an immigration firm where she advocated for individuals' rights in federal court.

Renée M. Landers is Professor of Law at Suffolk University Law School and Faculty Director of the Health and Biomedical Law Concentration and Master of Science in Law Life Sciences program. She teaches and writes in administrative, constitutional, health, and privacy law. Her experience spans private practice and positions as Deputy General Counsel, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, and Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Policy Development at the U.S. Department of Justice.

Francine J. Lipman is a William S. Boyd Professor of Law at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas. She was appointed to serve as a Nevada Tax Commissioner in 2016 and was reappointed in 2020. She is an elected member of American Law Institute, American College of Tax Counsel, and American Bar Foundation. She serves on the Editorial Board of the Human Rights magazine published by the ABA, Civil Rights and Social Justice Section and is in leadership on its Economic Justice Committee.

Moling Joyce Liu is a principal at the VENG Group where she oversees the firm's government affairs and strategic communications. She has successfully led the lobbying and communications efforts for her clients on bills and campaigns, including op-eds in The New York Times, The Washington Post, and USA Today on the topics of anti-Asian hate and representation. She holds a bachelor's degree in economics from Vanderbilt University.

Ryan Liu is an associate in Cooley LLP's Los Angeles office. His practice focuses on business litigation, including internal investigations, securities, and contract disputes. He also participates heavily in Cooley's pro bono work. His prior legal experience includes working for organizations like the American Civil Liberties Union's Disability Rights Program and Yale Law School's Veterans Legal Services Clinic. He holds a master's degree from the University of Oxford and a JD from Yale Law School.

Frank D. LoMonte is legal counsel for Cable News Network, Inc., advising journalists across the world about their rights in gathering and publishing news across all platforms. A graduate of the University of Georgia School of Law, he clerked for the Eleventh Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals, practiced with Atlanta-based Sutherland LLP, and formerly served as director of two organizations with a focus on open government and journalists' rights, the Brechner Center for Freedom of Information and the Student Press Law Center.

Karla McKanders is an expert in civil rights, immigration, and race in the law at Vanderbilt University Law School. She directs the Immigration Practice Clinic and teaches Immigration and Refugee Law. She clerked for the Honorable Damon J. Keith on the U.S. Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit in Detroit. She earned her law degree at Duke University, Masters in Theology from Vanderbilt University, and undergraduate degree at Spelman College.

Elliott Milhollin is a partner in the DC Office of Hobbs, Straus, Dean & Walker. He represents tribes and tribal organizations on a wide variety of Indian health-care issues before the Indian Health Service, the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, and State Medicaid programs. He has a broad range of experience working with the Indian Health Care Improvement Act, Affordable Care Act, Medicare, Medicaid, and the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act.

Kimberly Jade Norwood is the Henry H. Oberschelp Professor of Law at Washington University School of Law. She teaches courses in personal injury, education reform, and implicit bias. She authored two books, one on colorism and a second, published by the ABA, on matters contributing to the uprising in Ferguson. She has taught in China, Greece, Japan, the Netherlands, and Taiwan, and has supervised externships in Ghana and Kenya. Norwood speaks around the country on various implicit bias and DEI related matters, including matters of gender, gender expression/identity bias, colorism, and ableism. She also lectures on education equity and reform issues.

Beth H. Parker is General Counsel, Planned Parenthood California Central Coast and an Adjunct Professor at UC Law School San Francisco. She has served as General Counsel for four Planned Parenthood affiliates and Chief Legal Counsel for Planned Parenthood Affiliates of California. Previously, she was a complex civil litigation partner at Arnold & Porter and McCutchen, Doyle, Brown & Enersen, and mediator for the U.S. District Court. Among other high-profile matters, she litigated more than twenty reproductive rights cases. She graduated from Harvard Law School and Yale University.

Deborah J. Rotenberg has more than eighteen years of experience in Medicaid, Medicare, facility licensure, scope of practice, and provider-side billing/reimbursement issues. She advises various types of health-care providers relating to regulatory compliance, payment, and strategy, and her clients primarily include community clinics, reproductive health care, and abortion providers. She also has considerable policy and legislative advocacy experience and advises private organizations and public policymakers on health-care legislative and administrative proposals.

Mary Smith is President-Elect of the ABA and is the first Native American woman in this role. She is an independent board member and former CEO of a $6 billion national health-care organization, the Indian Health Service. She currently serves on the board of PTC Therapeutics, Inc. (NASDAQ: PTCT), a global biopharmaceutical company. She is also Vice-chair of the VENG Group. She is the founder and president of the Caroline and Ora Smith Foundation, which promotes Native American girls in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM).

Geoff Strommer joined Hobbs Straus in 1992 and is the managing partner of the Portland, Oregon office. He regularly represents tribes and tribal organizations on a broad range of issues, including litigation, contract negotiation, federal legislative initiatives, and tribal government legal capacity building. He is nationally recognized for knowledge of and experience working on a broad range of tribal health-care-related matters and issues faced by tribes under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act.

Heather Torres is the program director for the Tribal Law Policy Institute and is a graduate of the UCLA School of Law's Critical Race Studies program. She serves on the leadership team for the ABA Section of Civil Rights and Social Justice, Native American Concerns Committee.

Michael R. Ulrich is Assistant Professor at BU's School of Law and School of Public Health. He co-authored the Public Health Law casebook, and his scholarship has appeared in Stanford Law Review, New England Journal of Medicine, Hastings Law Journal, and American Journal of Bioethics, and been recognized by the American Society of Law, Medicine & Ethics and the American Constitution Society. Prior to BU, he was research scholar, senior fellow in Health Law, and lecturer in Law at Yale Law School.

David Valleau is a senior housing attorney at the CPLP, whose mission is to prevent homelessness in the state through legal representation, education, and advocacy. He specializes in representing mobile home residents throughout Colorado, particularly through eviction defense and Mobile Home Park Act issues. He formerly clerked for Hon. Edward D. Bronfin at the Second Judicial District in Colorado. He graduated from the DU Sturm College of Law in 2019.

Enid Zhou is Senior Counsel at EPIC. Her work covers a range of subjects, including artificial intelligence (AI) and automated decision-making systems, open government, and data protection. She also oversees EPIC's Open Government Project where she litigates open government cases in federal district court, coordinates open government policy, contributes to EPIC's amicus submissions on open government issues, and manages EPIC's robust Freedom of Information Act request docket. She is a graduate of UC Irvine School of Law.