The American Cancer Society estimates that nearly 269,000 women in the United States will be diagnosed with various stages of breast cancer in 2019. However, not all challenges confronting cancer patients are medical in nature. While coping with life-changing symptoms, debilitating treatments, and the anxieties of an uncertain future, cancer patients must also address complex legal issues such as insurance, employment, bankruptcy, divorce and end-of-life decisions. And it’s not always easy to get adequate legal help to sort through these issues. Learn how you can work with support organizations to help cancer patients and their families address challenges like these. Gain an understanding of the relevant laws and practices you will need to effectively provide legal assistance and support to cancer patients facing diagnosis and treatment, their families, and survivors.

Who Should Attend?
Attorneys, physicians, nurses, social workers, patient navigators, patients, caregivers, and anyone who may have a friend or family member going through cancer treatment.

What’s It About?
During treatment, cancer patients can face a variety of legal challenges, such as with insurance coverage and payment, treatment, employment, family, and mental health and end-of-life arrangements. Attorneys are likely to know people going through treatment. And many support organizations use volunteer attorneys to help patients face these challenges. The panel will review relevant laws and practices to enhance attendees’ awareness of cancer patients’ rights, and to enable attending attorneys to provide legal assistance to cancer patients going through diagnosis and treatment or to support their family members or friends.
