Lawyer, author, professor, business manager, and international consultant, Kenneth Crews is recognized in the United States and internationally as a leading teacher and scholar of copyright law. Through the past 25 years Dr. Crews has dedicated himself to teaching, studying and improving this area of the law and to the advancement of learning and knowledge. He is widely known for his research, policymaking, consulting, and leadership on copyright issues of importance to education and research.

In 1994 Dr. Crews was recruited to direct the nation’s first university-based copyright office, at Indiana University, where he held a tenured professorship in the McKinney School of Law in Indianapolis. In 2008 he relocated to Columbia University in New York City, joining the law faculty and founding a copyright policy office. He is among the founding faculty members of the LL.M. program of the Munich Intellectual Property Law Center and has been a visiting professor at the Université Paris I Panthéon-Sorbonne and in Bayreuth, Cairo, and Helsinki. The World Intellectual Property Organization (a U.N. agency) has commissioned him to analyze library copyright statutes from all 187 member countries; that study is informing current discussions in Geneva regarding a possible treaty or other legal instrument. Professor Crews has been an invited speaker and consultant at libraries and educational institutions and at conferences in 43 U.S. states and on five continents. He served as a testifying expert in recent copyright litigation brought against a large university, which is testing the limits of fair use in education.

Kenneth Crews began his career in Los Angeles where he returned in early 2014 to practice copyright and business law with Gipson Hoffman & Pancione for clients in diverse sectors, including nonprofit organizations and entertainment firms.

Dr. Crews is a prolific author of articles, books, essays, reports and monographs. His most recent book, Copyright Law for Librarians and Educators (Third Edition, 2012), is widely received as an insightful source for understanding and applying copyright law. Dr. Crews was the first recipient of the Patterson Copyright Award from the American Library Association.

Kenneth Crews studied at Northwestern University and Washington University before beginning his law career in L.A. He also earned a Ph.D. from UCLA, and his dissertation became the basis of his first copyright book, Copyright, Fair Use, and the Challenge for Universities.
