Economic Sanctions in the Trump Era

A discussion of national security and economic implications of U.S. sanctions regimes

Adam Smith is a partner at Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, specializing in international trade compliance. From 2010 to 2015, he served as the Senior Advisor to the Director of the U.S. Treasury Department’s Office of Foreign Assets Control (OFAC) and as the Director for Multilateral Affairs on the National Security Council. At OFAC he played a primary role in all aspects of government sanctions work, including advising the President on multilateral sanctions and policy guidance for both strengthening sanctions (Russia and Syria) and easing measures (Iran, Burma and Cuba) and advising on enforcement actions following sanctions violations. He is the author of numerous articles and two legal textbooks. His experiences inside and outside the government have given him extensive expertise on the structure and application of U.S. trade and investment regulation.
