John P. Carlin, former Assistant Attorney General for the DOJ’s National Security Division, will speak about his new book, Dawn of the Code War, a first-hand account of the internet-linked attacks on U.S. interests and how the US is preparing to fight back. As industries move into the global digital economy, Mr. Carlin says the U.S. becomes increasingly vulnerable to international adversaries in cyberspace. Former DNI James Clapper calls Dawn of the Code War a “crucial book for practitioners and laymen alike” and a “must read.”

John Carlin is also the former Chief of Staff and Senior Counsel to then-FBI Director Robert Mueller, and chairs the Aspen Institute’s Cybersecurity & Technology policy program.
