

From: David Dellinger
Sent: Monday, July 10, 2017 11:49 AM

Subject: Tenure for ABA Law Professors

To whom it may concern,

The very idea of hiring more adjunct staff and limiting or eliminating hiring tenure or tenure track law professors is very unsettling. Law schools are a lot of pressure to deliver higher quality law students, and hiring part-time, low paid staff is not the correct direction. It is actually the exact wrong direction. While hiring adjunct staff has its place for either very specialized topics or to fill temporary staffing shortages, it is not the way to go for long-term and quality instruction.

David Dellinger
Los Angeles/Eagle Rock, CA