Report

Introduction

The ABA Commission on Multijurisdictional Practice (MJP Commission) included two foreign lawyer recommendations in the package of reforms it proposed and the House of Delegates adopted in August 2002. They are the ABA Model Rule for the Licensing of Legal Consultants and the ABA Model Rule for Temporary Practice by Foreign Lawyers.1 Since 2002, the number of foreign companies with U.S. offices or operations in the United States has grown, as has the number of U.S. companies with foreign offices or operations. Consequently, interstate and international legal practice for in-house counsel, including those who are foreign lawyers, has also increased. It is now common for employers to require their in-house counsel to relocate to another U.S. jurisdiction or country.

In November 19, 2009, the ABA Commission on Ethics 20/20 issued its Preliminary Issues Outline, indentifying a number of issues for consideration and study and welcoming comments from all segments of the profession, the judiciary, and the public.
Among the questions raised was whether the ABA should include foreign lawyers within the scope of Model Rule of Professional Conduct 5.5’s practice authorization for in-house counsel and its Model Rule for Practice and Registration of in-house counsel.

In response to the comments it received, the Commission’s Working Group on Inbound Foreign Lawyers studied these and related issues. In addition to members of the Commission, members from the ABA Standing Committee on Ethics and Professional Responsibility, the ABA Standing Committee on Professional Discipline, the Section of International Law, the Real Property, Trust and Estate Law Section, the Task Force on International Trade in Legal Services, and the Section of Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar actively participated on the Working Group. The Commission thanks them for their participation and valuable contributions.

The Working Group conducted research and carefully considered whether (1) Rule 5.5 of the ABA Model Rules of Professional Conduct should permit limited practice authorization for foreign in-house counsel; and (2) whether the ABA Model Rule for Registration of In-House Counsel, which was adopted by the House of Delegates in August 2008, should include foreign lawyers and thus provide jurisdictions with a

August 2006, the Rule is now known as the Model Rule for the Licensing and Practice of Foreign Legal Consultants, http://www.americanbar.org/content/dam/aba/migrated/cpr/mjp/FLC.authcheckdam.pdf. See mechanism to implement the in-house authority in Rule 5.5(d). Model Rule 5.5(d) and the Model Rule on In-House Counsel Registration are closely related. The practice authorization for U.S. in-house counsel in Model Rule 5.5 (d) served as the basis for the creation of the In-House Counsel Registration Rule, which builds on it and provides a model rule for U.S jurisdictions to use to identify lawyers admitted elsewhere and who will be permitted to practice in-house in the jurisdiction. Identification of these lawyers will ensure their compliance with the jurisdiction’s dues and MCLE requirements and protect the public because these lawyers are required to comply with the jurisdiction’s rules of professional conduct and are subject to discipline.

The Working Group first recommended that the Commission propose amendments to Model Rule 5.5 that would provide limited practice authorization to foreign lawyers who are admitted in a foreign jurisdiction, but who are providing legal services solely to their employers as in-house counsel. This amendment would ensure that foreign lawyers who work solely for their employers as in-house counsel are not considered to be engaged in the unauthorized practice of law under Rule 5.5. To complement this proposed change to Model Rule 5.5, the Working Group also recommended that the Commission propose amendments to the ABA Model Rule for Registration of In-House Counsel to include foreign in-house counsel.

In June 2010, the Commission took no position on the Working Group’s recommendation, but disseminated broadly for comment Working Group templates and memoranda illustrating and explaining the basis for those suggested changes. At subsequent meetings, the Commission considered additional written responses and oral testimony on the subject. At its April 2011 meeting, the Commission endorsed both of the Working Group’s recommendations.

This Resolution and Report urges the ABA House of Delegates to amend the ABA Model Rule for Registration of In-House Counsel to include foreign lawyers. It should be read in conjunction with a separate Resolution and Report in which the Commission is recommending that the ABA House of Delegates amend Model Rule 5.5 to allow foreign in-house counsel to work for their employer in a U.S. jurisdiction where they are not licensed without running afoul of the prohibition against the unauthorized practice of law.

The Proposed Amendments to the ABA Model Rule for Registration of In-House Counsel

Adding foreign lawyers to the Model Rule for Registration of In-House Counsel would have several benefits. The Model Rule sets forth a method for monitoring and regulating those lawyers who qualify and register as in-house counsel. Moreover, it subjects

3 The Commission agreed that there is no reasonable risk to the client or the public from this authorization because: (1) the employer is competent to assess the lawyer’s qualifications and the quality of the lawyer’s work; and (2) the lawyer’s only client is the employer.

lawyers to the professional conduct rules and disciplinary authority of the local jurisdiction and provides for sanctions if they fail to register as in-house counsel. Thus, amending the Model Rule to permit foreign lawyers to register ensures that those lawyers are identifiable, subject to monitoring, and accountable for their conduct. Registration process does not create an automatic full licensing or admission process, nor does it place an undue burden on in-house counsel or the lawyer regulatory authority.

Some have expressed concerns that amending Model Rule 5.5 and the In-House Registration Rule to include foreign lawyers will constitute the “camel’s nose under the tent” of increased foreign lawyer presence in the U.S. The Commission disagrees with that proposition for several reasons. First, foreign lawyers are already in the U.S. and are practicing as in-house counsel. The Commission’s proposals would make sure that the regulatory authorities know who these lawyers are and which companies employ them. The proposals also ensure that the foreign lawyers are subject to the professional conduct rules of the jurisdiction where they are employed, are subject to sanctions if they fail to register or do not comply with the professional conduct rules, and can be referred to appropriate authorities in their home jurisdictions of registration and licensure in the event of a violation.

Second, the ABA Model Rule for Licensing and Practice of Foreign Legal Consultants demonstrates that ABA policy has long recognized that permitting foreign lawyers limited practice authority in the U.S. is beneficial to clients. That Model Rule was originally adopted in 1993. The Foreign Legal Consultant Rule limits the body of law on which the foreign lawyers may advise but does not limit the client population they may serve; Model Rule 5.5 and the In-House Registration Rule limit the clients whom foreign lawyers may advise and places certain limits on their scope of practice. In effect, the foreign lawyers will be able to provide the same scope of service to their organizational clients as they can now do from their home country offices.

Third, the quality of these foreign lawyers has been subject to careful scrutiny in two ways. In the context of the definition of “foreign jurisdiction” described below, they have been screened and admitted by the bar in their home jurisdiction, and their employers have determined that their credentials are worthy of employment. Both the bar and the employer possess a strong incentive to thoroughly investigate the lawyer’s character, fitness, and background. Because these lawyers work under a limited scope of practice and only for their client/employer, risk to the public associated with these proposed amendments is de minimus.

Arizona, Connecticut, Delaware, Georgia, Virginia, Washington, and Wisconsin have in-house registration rules that permit foreign lawyers limited authorization to work for their employers in the U.S. Georgia permits this limited practice authority, but does not require registration. Critically, the Commission is aware of no adverse consequences in these jurisdictions from such authority.

The Commission’s approach is also consistent with a joint proposal submitted in November 2010 to the New York Court of Appeals by the New York State Bar Association, the New York City Bar Association, and the New York County Lawyers’ Association. That proposal sought the adoption of rules that would provide for the limited licensure and registration of U.S. and foreign in-house counsel. Although the New York Court of Appeals ultimately adopted an in-house rule that does not include foreign lawyers, the unified recommendation of the three bar associations reflects the increasingly shared view that foreign lawyers should be permitted to serve as in-house counsel for their employers.

Support for this approach is further evidenced by a July 2010 resolution adopted by the Conference of Chief Justices. The resolution was proposed by the Conference’s Task Force on the Regulation of Foreign Lawyers and the International Practice of Law. It endorses in principle the changes proposed by the Commission, and it urges the adoption of those changes by the ABA House of Delegates.

With regard to the particular amendments that the Commission is proposing, the definition of “foreign jurisdiction” in Paragraph A of the Model Registration Rule is taken from the ABA Model Rule for Licensing of Foreign Legal Consultants and the ABA Model Rule for Temporary Practice by Foreign Lawyers. It provides that the lawyer must be a member in good standing of a recognized legal profession in the lawyer’s home country, and the members of that profession must be subject to effective regulation and discipline by a duly constituted professional body or public authority. This existing ABA definition has been adopted by U.S. state supreme courts in related contexts, and the Commission is not aware of problems that have arisen from its use.

The Commission also recommends requiring all lawyers registered under the Rule, domestic or foreign, to pay the annual lawyers’ fund for client protection assessment that is normally paid by licensed lawyers in the jurisdiction. This requirement is consistent with Comment [17] of Model Rule 5.5, which states that lawyers who establish an office or continuous presence in the state “may be subject to registration or other requirements, including assessments for client protection funds and mandatory continuing legal education.” It also is consistent with Rule 1(B)(2) of the ABA Model Rules for Lawyers’ Funds for Client Protection.

The Court, in its order adopting the rule did not explain its decision to exclude foreign lawyers. See, http://www.nycourts.gov/ctapps/news/notobar/InHouseCounsel041111.pdf

Consistent with the ABA Model Rule for Licensing and Practice of Foreign Legal Consultants, the Commission also proposes adding language to the In-House Registration Rule to require that a foreign lawyer provide with the completed application form required by the registration authority accurate English translation(s) of any documents demonstrating his or her admission to practice and good standing as a lawyer in any foreign jurisdictions.

The Rule would continue to prohibit registered in-house lawyers from appearing in court or other tribunal under the auspices of this registration, even if on behalf of the employer, unless they are admitted pro hac vice or by some other exception to the local licensure law. The amended Rule would continue to provide that lawyers registered under the Rule, whether U.S. or foreign, bear the burden of reporting any change in licensure and employment status.

Conclusion

With the Commission on Ethics 20/20’s suggested changes to Model Rule 5.5, these corresponding amendments to the Model Rule for Registration of In-House Counsel ensure that foreign lawyers who practice in the United States as in-house counsel are identified and subject to the disciplinary authority of the jurisdiction where they practice. Accordingly, the Commission on Ethics 20/20 respectfully requests that the House of Delegates approve the amendments to the Model Rule for Registration of In-House Counsel.
