FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS – PROSPECTIVE AUTHORS

1. What is the ABA Real Property, Trust and Estate Law Journal?

The Journal is a scholarly publication in a law-review format. The Journal differs from traditional law reviews in that it has a dual editorial board consisting of an editorial board of practicing lawyers who are members of ABA’s Real Property, Trust and Estate (RPTE) Section and a student editorial board that is located at the University of South Carolina School of Law. The Journal focuses on subjects of interest and importance to lawyers practicing in the fields of real property, estate planning, probate, and trust law.

2. What is the circulation of the RPTE Law Journal?

The Journal’s subscription base consists of over 22,000 RPTE section members, the major law libraries in the United States, and the major electronic research databases.

3. How often is the RPTE Law Journal published?

Three times a year.

4. How do you find articles for the RPTE Law Journal?

Articles are generally reviewed and selected by a team of three editors from the professional editorial board. Although the Journal editors actively encourage subject matter experts and CLE presenters to develop their topics into articles, approximately two thirds of the articles published in the Journal are sent in by authors without solicitation. Authors need not be RPTE Section members.

5. Why should I write an article for the RPTE Law Journal?

Publishing an article in the Journal allows law professors to reach an audience of attorneys whose practices will benefit from their articles. For practicing attorneys, publishing an article in the Journal provides an opportunity to display exceptional knowledge on a particular topic, gain national recognition, contribute to the development of the law, and have their work permanently archived in libraries and electronic research databases.

6. What is the process for submitting an article to the RPTE Law Journal?

Email the article to rptej@law.sc.edu. You may also direct any questions to the Journal’s Editor, Amy Milligan, at milligal@law.sc.edu.

7. Do I need to have my topic pre-approved?

No, but the professional editors are happy to provide feedback if you would like to discuss article ideas.
8. How long should an article be?

Typical article length in the Journal is approximately 30-40 pages with 100 to 200 footnotes, but articles can range from 10 to over 100 pages.

9. May the article include forms?

Yes, if appropriate for the subject matter. Section publications are primarily for practitioners, who always appreciate forms they can use in their practice.

10. How long does it take for an article to be published?

The time to publication varies depending on many factors, including how many articles are in the queue. However, the minimum is approximately five months. Our lag time compares very favorably with other law-review format publications.

11. Do citations need to be in formal Bluebook style?

Yes, although the Student Editorial Board checks and corrects the Bluebooking.

12. Do I get to provide feedback on changes to my article?

Yes. The citations and sources will be thoroughly checked by the Student Editorial Board, who will also suggest changes to the text. You will then have an opportunity to review the article again and discuss additional changes with a professional editor.
FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS – PROSPECTIVE EDITORS

1. What is the ABA Real Property, Trust and Estate Law Journal?

   The Journal is a scholarly publication in a law-review format. The Journal differs from traditional law reviews in that it has a dual editorial board consisting of an editorial board of practicing lawyers who are members of ABA’s Real Property, Trust and Estate (RPTE) Section and a student editorial board that is located at the University of South Carolina Law School. The Journal focuses on subjects of interest and importance to lawyers practicing in the fields of real property, estate planning, probate, and trust law.

   The Journal’s subscription base consists of over 22,000 RPTE section members, the major law libraries in the United States, and the major electronic research databases.

3. How often is the RPTE Law Journal published?

   Three times a year.

4. How do you recruit professional editors?

   Replacement editors are usually recruited from active RPTE Section members at meetings, but expressions of interest are welcome from any RPTE Section member. Turnover among the professional editors probably averages one or two openings every few years.

5. What are the different editorial positions?

   There are two Associate Editors and two Assistant Editors. They provide an additional level of professional review after the student editors finish with an article.

   There are two Acquisitions Editors and two Associate Acquisitions Editors. They solicit and review incoming articles.

   There is one Editor. The Editor reviews articles at both the beginning and end of the editorial process, and proofs the final product. Additionally, the Editor works with the professional editors as well as the staff and students at the University of South Carolina School of Law.

   There is also a Administrative Assistant at the University of South Carolina School of Law.

   Finally, there are approximately 25-40 members of the Student Editorial Board at University of South Carolina School of Law.
6. What background do I need to become a professional editor?

The professional editors are lawyers with a background in some aspect of real property and/or trust and estate law, and they are members of the ABA and the RPTE Section. Experience with a similar journal in law school is helpful but not necessary. Reliability and attention to detail are important.

7. What is the time commitment for a professional editor?

The time commitment varies greatly. The Associate and Assistant Editors may spend as little as three to four hours every three to four months reviewing articles. Acquisitions Editors spend an average of three or four hours a month reading article submissions, although the timing can be irregular. The Editor spends two to four hours a week during ordinary weeks, and six to ten hours per week for two to three weeks when an edition is in final production.

8. How long are the professional editor appointment terms?

Appointments are renewed each year, but a willingness to serve for at least two to three years is strongly preferred.

9. Who does the Bluebooking and citation checking?

The Student Editorial Board, with oversight by the Editor.

10. Do the professional editors need to attend meetings or travel?

Professional editors are encouraged to attend two RPTE Section leadership meetings each year, but the editors can attend the Journal meetings by telephone if they are unable to travel.

11. Are professional editors reimbursed for expenses?

Editors are invited to the Section’s two leadership meetings, and their expenses are reimbursed, subject to the same limitations as others attending the same meetings.

12. What involvement do the professional editors have with the University of South Carolina School of Law?

The professional editors are encouraged to visit the University of South Carolina School of Law and meet the student editors and staff if possible, but most of the professional editors do not have substantial, ongoing involvement with the students. The Associate and Assistant Editors communicate directly with the student Editor in Chief when they review articles, and the Editor is in regular contact with the student Editor in Chief and the administrative assistant at the University of South Carolina School of Law.
Memorandum for Authors

This memorandum is a guide for authors submitting articles for publication in Probate & Property, the magazine of the Section of Real Property, Trust and Estate Law of the ABA.

1. Editorial Purpose: Probate & Property strives to present material of interest to lawyers practicing in the areas of real property, trusts, and estates. Authors should aim to provide practical information that will aid lawyers in giving their clients accurate, prompt, and efficient service.

2. Manuscript Preparation: Manuscripts should be double-space, typed in a font equivalent to 12 pt. Times New Roman, formatted to print on 8 1/2” by 11” paper, and submitted as an e-mail attachment in any commonly used word processing program (such as WordPerfect or Microsoft Word) for a PC. Probate & Property does not use footnotes or endnotes with articles, but cases and other authorities should be cited (see 4 below). Please submit articles to the appropriate articles editor:

Before submitting an article, the author may wish to consult the appropriate articles editor. Probate & Property seeks to publish articles ranging from 1,500 to 4,000 words in length (approximately 7 to 18 double-spaced, typed pages). Subject matter will be an important consideration, but articles that are too long for the magazine’s limited space will of necessity be rejected or edited to fit. The best length for an article in the magazine is 2,000 to 3,000 words. Relevant charts, tables, photographs, illustrations, and sample language are desirable and will be included as space permits, at the discretion of the editors.

3. Web Searching: The author should provide at least five keywords and a one-sentence description of the article to enhance electronic searching when the article is uploaded to the magazine’s web page.

4. Style: Articles should present practical information in a clear and readable manner. The style should be as nontechnical as possible, and “legalese” should be avoided. The extensive use of bullet points is discouraged. Articles should be written for the lawyer who is not a specialist in the subject and who is looking for usable information that is not difficult or time-consuming to read. Introductions and conclusions are strongly encouraged. Short paragraphs and sentences are preferred. Short subheads are suggested in longer articles. When an article includes tables, charts, or forms, these should not be included within the body of the article but should be submitted on separate pages. Except when referring to a specific individual, articles should be gender neutral. Generally, they should also be written in the third person. Cases or other relevant authority should be cited in the body of the article. Please use only one cite; parallel cites are not necessary. Use the West Reporter cites. For Tax Court decisions, cite to T.C. or B.T.A., if therein; otherwise cite to T.C.M. (CC, C), T.C.M. (P-H), T.C.M. (R), or B.T.A.M. (P-H).

5. Author Credits: Probate & Property authors will receive bylines and credit lines. Generally, the credit line will include only the author’s name, title, firm, company or school, city and state, Section committee memberships or other Section activities, and, if applicable, the RPTE committee or group of which the article is a project. No biographical sketches, names of those who inspired or assisted in preparing the article, or other information will be included.

6. Multiple Authors: When more than one person has written an article, one person should be designated who can be contacted about editorial changes. The authors named should be only those who have actually written the article and should not include persons who have assisted with research or in other ways.

7. Committee and Group Projects: If the article is the project of a committee or group of RPTE, the author (if a single author) or person designated as the editorial contact (if multiple authors) should be so indicated at the time of submission. Only individuals may be authors, however; the committee or group itself may not be an author.

8. Disclosure: Each author should disclose any relationship he or she may have with the firm, company, or person producing any product or providing any service referred to in the article and any financial or other interest he or she may have in any product or service discussed in the article. The author should make full disclosure even when the relevance seems remote. Full disclosure will allow the editors to judge the objectivity of the author, to determine whether a real or apparent conflict of interest exists, and to determine whether disclosure should be made in publishing the article.

9. Copyright: It is the policy of Probate & Property that on all submissions of original articles the author retains the copyright but the American Bar Association and Probate & Property, on acceptance of the article for publication, shall have:
   a. first publication rights (unless the article is submitted and identified as a reprint);
   b. subsequent, multiple reprint rights in any American Bar Association publication in any medium;
   c. the right to grant access to the article, its title, and other bibliographic citation material stored electronically in public databases and to furnish printed copies requested through public databases; and
   d. the right to authorize others to reproduce or reprint the article, subject to the author's consent.

For questions about the ABA's copyright policies, contact ABA's Licensing & Copyrights Department.

10. Warranty and Representation: By submission of an article to Probate & Property, the author warrants and represents that he or she has included no material in the article in violation of any rights of any other person or entity; that he or she has disclosed to Probate & Property all relationships with any person or entity producing any product or providing any service referred to in the article, and that he or she has disclosed any financial or other interest in any product or service discussed in the article.

11. Publication Agreement: Authors of accepted articles are required to sign a Publication Agreement, which includes the author’s warranty that the work is original and does not infringe on the rights of others. Please note that ABA General Counsel discourages changes to the standard publication agreement. Alterations to the agreement must be reviewed by ABA Licensing & Copyrights and ABA General Counsel and are subject to approval.

12. Multiple Submissions: If an article is submitted or accepted for publication elsewhere before acceptance by Probate & Property, the author agrees to notify the appropriate articles editor immediately. As a general rule, Probate & Property does not accept articles that have been published elsewhere. The submission of previously published material is strongly discouraged.

13. Editing of Title and Text: Probate & Property reserves the right to change the title of any article accepted for publication and to edit the text of the article. Proofs of the edited article—but not the edited manuscript—will be sent to the author for comment.

14. Payment for Articles/Complimentary Copies: Probate & Property does not pay for articles. Each author will receive five complimentary copies of the issue in which the author’s article appears and a pdf of the article, without artwork, for the author’s use in internal marketing, for client mailings, and on the author’s organization’s web site.

15. Reprints: The author’s grant of permission to reprint the article in another publication does not include the right to freely photocopy or otherwise directly reproduce the actual pages on which the article appears. Photographs, illustrations, cartoons, advertisements, and the text from other articles that may appear on the page with the author’s text should be blocked out before reproduction. The reproduction of the ABA logo, covers, and mastheads of ABA publications is strictly prohibited. For questions about the ABA’s reprint policies, contact ABA’s Copyrights & Contracts Department.

16. Acceptance Policy: No single member of the Editorial Board has the authority to commit to the publication of any article before it has been submitted, even when the article has been specifically solicited by a member of the Board. Authors are notified by the appropriate articles editor of the acceptance or rejection of articles. In its discretion, the Editorial Board may withdraw an article previously selected for publication, delay publication of a selected article, or rescind a selected article.

17. Author’s Agreement: By permitting the publication of an article in Probate & Property, the author agrees to all the terms, provisions, and policies of Probate & Property stated in this Memorandum for Authors.
FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS BY PROSPECTIVE AUTHORS

1. What kind of articles are you looking for?
   Articles with practical information of interest to lawyers practicing in the areas of real property, trusts, and estates. Topics vary from broad introductions helpful to lawyers working on a task or matter that is new to them, to advanced analyses of specific issues, to cutting-edge reports on new developments.

2. How long should my article be?
   Seven to eighteen double-spaced typed printed pages (1500 to 4000 words).

3. How do I submit an article for consideration?
   Email a completed article in Word to Stephanie Casteel (scasteel@wallacetrustlaw.com) for estate or trust-related topics, or to Brent Shaffer (bshaffer@ycst.com) for real estate-related topics.

4. Do I need to have my topic pre-approved before I write my submission?
   Absolutely not required, but you are welcome to do so. Often we can provide feedback on whether we have recently published, or currently have in production, another article on the same or a similar topic and the likelihood that a submission on that topic would be accepted.

5. Do I need to worry about citations and The Bluebook?
   Though the magazine does not use footnotes, we do want citations in the text of your article, especially those that would be helpful to a reader wanting to find out more information about the topic. Lack of familiarity with The Bluebook should not discourage anyone from submitting an article, as our editors will assist in making sure citations are in proper form.

6. Can I revise my article after it is accepted for publication?
   Not unless we ask you to do so as a condition to acceptance. You should consider your submission to be your final draft.

7. What's your editing process?
   Our Managing Editor at the ABA will first make revisions to conform to our magazine’s format and style conventions, then our Associate Articles Editors, Articles Editor, and Editor of the magazine will review your article in succession.

8. Do I get to provide feedback on any changes you make to my article?
   Yes, you will be mailed page proofs for review once all edits are complete.
9. Will you accept my article for publication if I previously published it elsewhere?

   Generally, we insist on being the point of first publication. As explained in our Reprint Policy (found here: http://www.americanbar.org/content/dam/aba/administrative/real_property_trust_estate/aba_rpte_publications_reprint_permission_policies.pdf), authors retain rights to their articles and may republish them freely with revisions, or may reprint them with proper attribution to Probate & Property. ABA permission is needed for any reprints that use ABA logos or artwork from the magazine, however.

10. How quickly can you publish my article?

    The time interval from the article submission deadline for an issue until the issue is mailed is 4 months.

11. Where can I get more information about writing for Probate & Property?

    Our Memorandum for Authors can be found here: http://www.americanbar.org/content/dam/aba/administrative/real_property_trust_estate/aba_rpte_publications_magazine_memo_for_authors.pdf
Guidelines for eReport submissions:

- We do not guarantee acceptance of articles in advance, though we do indicate our interest in a proposed topic.

- We prefer articles of current interest since eReport is intended to present up to date information, and we discourage very long and heavily footnoted articles since eReport is not a law review. Where appropriate, we may refer a potential author to the Section magazine or law journal for consideration.

- Articles cannot promote a particular product or company, and logos, designs, etc. must be removed from any published text.

- An author must disclose any relationship to a product being reviewed or recommended (e.g., a document assembly program).

- A brief biography of the author should contain the author’s employer and postal and email address, and a link to the author’s law firm or other employer is fine.

- All authors must sign a standard ABA release form.

- Items may be of any length because we publish by electronic links -- some items are two page summaries of recent cases or rulings, while some articles exceed 100 or 200 pages and are in-depth discussions of new topics.

- Drafts should be submitted in Microsoft Word with endnotes rather than footnotes, and in Ariel 12 point.

- Drafts should be submitted approximately six weeks before publication, which is quarterly, generally in February, May, August, and November.

- The eReport editor is Robert Steele at rsteele@ssrga.com

- The RP editor is Cheryl Kelly at ckelley@thompsoncoburn.com

- The TE editor is Ray Prather at ray@pratherebner.com
FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS BY PROSPECTIVE AUTHORS

What makes eReport different from the other Section publications?

The most important distinction is that eReport is electronic. It is delivered by email only (see below) and consists of links to electronic versions of articles and other items of interest. Since eReport is electronic, it is flexible in many ways.

How is eReport delivered and to whom?

eReport is delivered every other month via email to all Section members with valid email addresses. At the ABA website, www.americanbar.org, click myABA and then navigate to Email, Lists and Subscriptions. You have the option of receiving eReport. Currently almost 19,000 Section members receive eReport.

What kind of articles are you looking for?

We are looking for timely articles on almost any topic of interest to real estate or trust and estate lawyers. This covers anything from recent case decisions, whether federal or state, if of general interest, administrative rulings, statutory changes, new techniques with practical tips, etc. The best guide is to look at prior issues, all of which are on the Section website. https://www.americanbar.org/groups/real_property_trust_estate/publications/ereport/

How long should my article be?

Since eReport is electronic and therefore very flexible, we can publish a two page case or ruling summary, and we can publish a 150 page article. eReport is able to do this since the main page consists of links to the underlying article, therefore imposing no page restraints. This is a unique feature of eReport.

How do I submit an article for consideration?

Email either a paragraph on a potential topic or a polished draft – the choice is yours – to the Editor, Robert Steele, at rsteele@ssrga.com, and either our Real Estate Editor, Cheryl Kelly, at CKelly@thompsoncoburn.com, or our Trust and Estate Editor, Raymond Prather, at ray@pratherebner.com.

Do I need to have my topic pre-approved before I write my submission?

Not required, but the choice is yours. We welcome topic suggestions and can give guidance at that stage, or you may submit a detailed outline or even a full draft. You may even submit an article previously published (discussed below) for our consideration.

Do citations need to be in formal Bluebook style?
eReport is the most informal publication of the Section. We do not publish with heavy footnotes and all references are in endnotes. If there are citations, however, whether to the case you are writing about, or in endnotes, they should be in proper Bluebook format to allow the reader to find the material. Certainly you may include hyperlinks to materials as well.

Can I revise my article after it is accepted for publication?

While we do not encourage last minute changes, it is possible to make changes since we work on Word documents until right before publication when all articles are converted to pdf format for publication.

What is your editing process?

Our Editor and either the Trust and Estate Editor or the Real Estate Editor work together to finalize your article. The article and the style are yours, however, and you are solely responsible for the content and accuracy. We will just help to polish the article, not re-write it. Our authors have a huge variety of styles and we embrace all variety in our publication.

Do I get to provide feedback on any changes that you make to my article?

Yes. We will email a final draft to you unless we have only made very minor typographical or grammatical changes.

Will you accept an article for publication if I previously published it elsewhere?

YES! This is another unique feature of eReport. We bring almost 19,000 new readers to your material. Therefore, something substantive published on your firm’s or company’s website or elsewhere may be accepted for publication if we believe that our readers will benefit from your analysis and insight. In some cases, articles are updated or refreshed for eReport. In other cases, we re-publish essentially unchanged, but logos and biographical information is either eliminated or moved to the end of the article.

How quickly can you publish my article?

Since we publish every other month, the lead time is rarely more than two months. If you have a submission on a very timely topic, we can publish in under a month and present your insights on a new topic in a matter of weeks.

Where can I get more information about writing for eReport?

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS BY PROSPECTIVE AUTHORS

1. Why should I write a book for the Real Property Trust and Estate Section (RPTE) of the ABA?

   You are knowledgeable and experienced in the substantive content of the book. The subject matter is timely either as a classic topic not recently treated or as a changing area of the law caused by recent case law or legislation. You have the time and inclination to write. Publishing through the RPTE provides an opportunity for authors to gain national recognition.

2. What is the number of books sold by the RPTE for a particular publication?

   The answer depends upon the title of the book and the audience for the publication. Generally, 1,000 copies is a good seller. In some cases, major corporations have written and published books through RPTE which they market to their clients.

3. What royalties are paid to authors? How are royalties divided between multiple authors? Does the editor of a multi-authored book receive royalties?

   Each contract is negotiated separately. Typically there is a 10% gross profit royalty paid to a single author which can be shared in the case of two authors. A royalty is not paid in the event of multiple authors with a coordinating editor(s) on a single publication but the Section does furnish those authors with a certain quantity of free copies.

   For books written by members of the same law firm or corporation (i.e. all contributing authors are from same organization), ABA Publishing can provide customized covers and bulk sale prices.

4. How long should a book be?

   Average length of a book is 200-300 pages, but a publication could exceed that and be hundreds of pages. Entirely dependent on the topic and the author’s determination of the depth and breadth it should cover.

5. Should the book contain forms?

   Absolutely, if appropriate for the subject matter. Forms help sell books! Our publications are primarily for practitioners who always appreciate forms they can use in their practice.

6. What is the process for having a book published by RPTE?

   a. For detailed description, see the attached Exhibits. Exhibit A is entitled “Book Publications Process” and Exhibit B is entitled “The Entity Book Publishing Process – A Quick Guide.”
b. In general: Submit a proposal to RPTE Books Committee (see the ABA Publishing Proposal Form attached as Exhibit C) for review and approval. Upon approval, a contract is entered into with ABA Publishing. An editor is assigned to work with the author. Together the editor and the author develop timelines for manuscript delivery and final publication. Once a draft manuscript is submitted, peer review is conducted. Upon completion of peer review, ABA Publishing takes over for final editing, pricing, cover design and publication.

7. What is the length of time from acceptance of proposal to publication?
Manuscripts are typically submitted for publication one year from acceptance of a book proposal and contract signing. Each manuscript is peer reviewed. Once a manuscript is in final form and approved, it is submitted to ABA publishing and is typically produced in about 80 days after that submission.

8. Is the process the same for electronically published books?
Yes. Note that all current titles are presently being produced both in paper and electronic formats.

9. Is there a style sheet available to assist the author in developing an appropriate format for the book?
Not at this time.

10. Can a book have multiple authors?
Yes, but these types of books also require at least one of the authors to serve as the editor for the book.

11. If a book does have multiple authors, how does the Books Committee ensure that there is consistency of format and style before submitting for publication?
This is a challenge for the editor(s) of the book, who must organize the authors and coordinate amongst them to achieve consistency of format and style.

12. Can an author use material in a book that has previously been used for other purposes (i.e. CLE, magazine article)?
Yes! This is often a source for our book authors; however, copyright matters and releases, if needed, will have to be worked out prior to entering into a contract.

13. Is there any revenue sharing with ABA Publishing?
There is no revenue sharing with the ABA. Remuneration is in the form of a royalty.
14. Will the editors of the RPTE Books Committee provide the necessary expertise to review a book for substantive content?
Yes.

15. Will the author have any input prior to the book being type set?
Not generally, but see No. 3 above. If an author has a very definite vision for the cover design of the book, RPTE and ABA Publishing will work with the author to achieve a satisfactory result.

16. What is the role of the Editors on the RP Books Committee? On the TE Books Committee?
Editors on both the RP Books Committee and TE Books Committee have a similar focus.

The Acquisition Editors generate book ideas and identify authors to write the manuscripts.

The Book Editors manage the overall peer review process of the manuscripts.

These are distinct efforts on the RP Books Committee and combined on the TE Books Committee. So an RP publication will have both an Acquisition and Book Editor while a TE publication will have one Editor that serves both capacities.

Among the criteria Book Editors focus on during the review process is accuracy and whether the book provides a significant review or analysis of the topic, contains sound scholarship and is of practical interest. A timeline is generated identifying all of the books and authors in the pipeline. The Book Editors work with the editors to see that the manuscripts they are responsible for are reviewed and completed in accordance with the timeline.

Above all, RP and TE Book Editors are seeking to identify manuscripts that are practical, reasonable and straightforward and have a style that is appropriate to the subject/audience.

The Entity Book Publishing Process—A Quick Guide

ABA Publishing is dedicated to helping ABA entities achieve their strategic publishing goals by providing professional editorial, marketing, design and production services. This guide is intended as a quick reference to the book publishing process. The goal of this document is to clarify the roles and responsibilities of your Book Board and ABA Publishing. A publishing workflow diagram is included as a reference. Other documents are included to illustrate points throughout the process.

Throughout the book publishing process an ABA Publishing team consisting of an editor and marketer are the primary contacts in supporting the entity.

1. Book ideas: Because Book Publishing Board members themselves have expertise and contacts with practitioners in a given area, ideally the Board is the primary driver for developing a pipeline of titles consistent with the entity’s book publishing strategy.
   a. Generating book ideas – Book ideas can come from virtually any source, but the Board should set down some guidelines for the type of titles that are desired as well as suggestions for specific titles and perhaps authors. ABA Publishing can help the Board structure a coherent title list by mapping areas of topics against possible book audiences to suggest title/series opportunities. Sample maps are included to provide you with some idea of this process. These are illustrative only. Each entity’s map is developed in close consultation with the Board. The goal is to make the best use of the entity’s publishing resources to achieve the best financial and mission results.
   b. Gathering book ideas – Each idea is captured in a Book Proposal filled out by the author or other person (such as a Publication Board member). These proposals should be sent to both the Board Chair and the appropriate Executive Editor at ABA Publishing so that proposals can be considered in an orderly and efficient manner.

2. Proposal Evaluation Process -- To ensure proper consideration of each idea in the context of the entity’s strategy, there should be a two-part evaluation process.
   a. Initial evaluation – Each proposal should be evaluated initially for fit with the entity’s publishing strategy, including the existence of similar types of books on other topics (i.e., whether a series can be developed), fit with the needs of the profession and the particular audience (e.g., types of attorney or industry). Ideally this evaluation would be discussed at a meeting of the Publication Board, including representatives from ABA Publishing editorial and marketing functions, after each member has had a chance to review the proposal in advance. If the Board decides not to proceed with a particular title, the Chair should notify the submitter of the Proposal.

b. Preparation of Business Case -- For each proposal approved at the initial evaluation stage, ABA Publishing will prepare a business case for the book. The business case will include:
   i. a clear specification of the book's content,
