<td>Moving Up Instead of Moving Out: What We Know from Long-Term Careers for Women in Law Research</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Despite the great influx of women into the profession over the past 30 years, far too many experienced women attorneys are leaving their firms just when they should be in the prime of their careers and enjoying the most success. Clients are increasingly seeking senior women lawyers to try cases and lead deals on their behalf, and firms that continue to allow a gender gap will find themselves at a competitive disadvantage in the legal marketplace. Equally problematic is the loss of talent and diversity when large numbers of women outright leave the legal profession, in much greater numbers than men. The ABA’s ground breaking Initiative on Achieving Long-Term Careers for Women in Law, co-chaired by Roberta Liebenberg and Stephanie Scharf, conducted a series of innovative research studies of experienced women, men, and managing partners across a spectrum of practice settings, to examine the everyday experiences that affect the satisfaction, success, and attrition of experienced women attorneys. Based on the results of their eye-opening research, Bobbi and Stephanie will recommend concrete strategies and solutions to create a more level playing field for women attorneys at all stages of their careers and to stem the attrition of talented and experienced women from the legal profession.</td>

Developing a Gritty Team
Beyond developing your own personal grit and growth mindset – two of the main characteristics of successful women lawyers – how can you help those you work with maximize their grit and growth mindset to support team success? Grit and growth mindset are important tools to develop for staying focused and committed to longer-term goals and handling challenging situations. Lots of conferences address how you can be “gritty” but these speakers will tackle a new topic and share how to create and support a “gritty team” in a legal working environment.

Speakers: Paulette Brown, Senior Partner and Chief Diversity and Inclusion Officer, Locke Lord, LLP; Ingrid Busson-Hall, Senior Director, Head of Financial Crimes Advisory and Workplace Relations, PayPal; Elizabeth Deeley, Partner, Latham & Watkins; Dr. Milana Hogan, Chief Legal Talent Officer, Sullivan & Cromwell, LLP
