Dear Colleagues:

The Forum is setting its sights on project management in the beautiful city of Seattle for the 2020 Annual Meeting. Join us in the Emerald City for the first time in more than 20 years to experience our first-rate education programs and networking opportunities. Construction industry thought leaders and distinguished practitioners from the U.S. and Canada will present important and universally useful skills for managing projects, while embracing the diversity, culture, and beauty of the Pacific Northwest.

This meeting, focused entirely on project management, will explore key elements of successful projects - large and small - from the perspective of all stakeholders in the design and construction dialogue. We will kick off the conference with our keynote speaker, Edward W. Merrow, author of Industrial Megaprojects: Concepts, Strategies, and Practices for Success (John Wiley & Sons, 2011) and Leading Complex Projects, A Data Driven Approach to Mastering the Human Side of Project Management (John Wiley & Sons, 2018). Mr. Merrow will provide insights into project management successes and pitfalls on a basic level that can be applied to projects of any size.

From there, we will examine the evolving role of project managers in the United States and Canada and how this evolution impacts project delivery, owners, design professionals, contractors, and construction managers. Two sessions will examine the industry changes driving the increased use of construction management project delivery through the lens of the AIA’s new 2019 contract documents in both the pre-construction and construction phases.

We will take an in-depth and comparative look at the use of Public-Private Partnerships (P3) in the U.S. and Canada and explore the impact on project management of integrated project delivery (IPD), termination, immigration enforcement, and the role of design professionals. Plus, we will include sessions addressing legal project management from the perspective of in-house and outside counsel and lawyers’ ethical obligations in managing their client relationships. All of these sessions will aid practitioners—whether in-house or outside counsel—in better understanding their clients’ interests and needs, leading to better counseling and advocacy.

Our diversity and inclusion speaker, Tewanee Joseph, was a leader in planning the 2010 Winter Olympics in Vancouver and Whistler, BC, and was instrumental in achieving key involvement of indigenous groups, symbols, and themes for the Winter Games. He will address the importance of inclusion as one of the best practices for achieving shared goals among diverse groups.

Whether you love a bustling city, the mountains, or large bodies of water, our host city, Seattle, is a spectacularly beautiful destination and has something for you! Attendees can explore and enjoy city treasures such as the Space Needle, Pike Place Market, Pioneer Square, Puget Sound, and much more. Also, be sure to join Forum colleagues on a tour of Washington’s amazing wine country in Woodinville, WA. Seattle, the current home to Starbucks Coffee, Boeing, Microsoft, Amazon, the Seahawks, and the former home of Jimi Hendriks and Kurt Cobain, awaits you. Between the annual meeting’s great CLE programs and all this city has to offer, you will truly find yourself sleepless in Seattle. Don’t miss out!
PROGRAM SCHEDULE

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 22

1:00 P.M. – 4:00 P.M.  Practicum
Technology in Construction Law: Where Are We and What Is Next? (the Modernization of Construction Law)
Separate Registration Required

1:00 P.M. – 2:15 P.M.  Part 1: Where Are We?
Speakers will lead the attendees through hands-on demonstrations of technology that is currently available to the construction litigator. Demonstrations will include technologies geared toward case analytics for strategy development, depositions, and trial presentation.

2:15 P.M. – 2:30 P.M.  Break

2:30 P.M. – 4:00 P.M.  Part 2: What’s Next?
Speakers will lead a discussion on the future state of construction law as the industry is rapidly modernizing. Legal technology issues once meant e-discovery, trial-graphics, and technology-assisted review, but the playing field is changing rapidly. Now, engineering and construction firms are undergoing a digital transformation, and project delivery and execution is changing. In-house legal departments use data analytics to support risk management and expect law-firms to use data analytics to help predict outcomes and inform strategy. Hear from and engage with industry thought leaders on issues at the intersection of the law and technology, how construction law will need to adapt, and what you must know to keep up with the rapid pace of change.

8:15 A.M. – 9:30 A.M.  Practically Perfect Project Planning and Performance: Why Megaprojects Fail So Often and Why You Should Care No Matter the Size of Your Client’s Project

The Forum welcomes national speaker and author, Edward W. Merrow, author of Industrial Megaprojects: Concepts, Strategies, and Practices for Success, along with one of our former Forum Chairs, Andrew D. Ness, to speak on four timely topics: 1. Seven Key Mistakes Repeatedly Made and How to Help Your Clients to Stop Making Them; 2. Why Proper Planning Must Precede Your Client’s Project Start, a/k/a Avoiding the Shiny Silver Shovel Syndrome; 3. People Do Projects, So Press Your Client to Get the Right Team on Board and Give Them the Resources to Execute; and 4. Why Counsel Wants the Project Contracts to Become Irrelevant and How to Make That Happen. All four of these topics are critical to proper project planning and execution. Knowing these issues will enhance your representation of any member of the project team towards achieving the desired results.

It’s All in a Name: PM, CM – What Do You Do?
Project management (PM) firms have become commonplace on construction sites, but their roles, authority, and responsibilities have evolved and are often ambiguous or misunderstood. How well-qualified are today’s PM firms in light of these changes? Are PM’s adding value? How has the involvement of PM firms changed the relationships among the project participants? The panel will address these questions, plus recent legal developments about the risks and liabilities of the PM role, which increase the importance of proper selection and contracting methods for overall project success.

Eyeing Our Bottom Lines: How Legal Project Management Can Lead to Efficiency and Profit
How can lawyers use clients’ project planning techniques? This session will explore best practices for managing cases from inception through settlement/judgment; developing meaningful budgets for clients; building and managing staff; marshalling e-discovery; and scheduling the case to on-time and on-budget completion.

Seeing the Big Picture: Construction Management Under the 2019 AIA CM Contracts – Part 1: Preconstruction
One of the most profound changes in the construction industry in recent years is the expanded role of the construction manager on public and private projects. This session will explore this evolution | through the AIA’s updated 2019 CM-at-Risk and CM-Advisor contracts, focusing on the context of pre-construction phase services and the impact of those contractual changes on owners, design professionals, and contractors. What are the market forces and legal considerations driving these changes? Where are we headed next?

This panel will continue examining the industry shift to construction manager project delivery in the context of services provided in the construction phase. As with Part 1 (Plenary 3), the panel will discuss the market and legal considerations that shaped the AIA’s 2019 changes to its CM-at-Risk and CM-Advisor contracts and examine the practical implications of the revised AIA documents for owners, design professionals, and contractors.

   Bridging Project Borders: P3 Lessons from Canada and the United States
   Public-Private Partnership (P3) project delivery systems have been used successfully for years in Canada and are becoming more common in the United States as public bodies continue to look for creative ways to fund America’s aging infrastructure. P3 projects create unique risks and contractual relationships that are not common in other types of project delivery methods. Our speakers will examine recent trends and lessons learned in P3 projects on both sides of the U.S.-Canada border, along with trending contract terms and relationships, project structure, elements of a successful project, and unusual risks to project participants, plus sample enabling legislation, risk management tools, and tips for forecasting future uses.

PLENARY SESSION 6

Going Nuclear. Managing Termination: When and How to Say “When”

The decision to terminate kicks off a lengthy chain reaction for the project manager on both sides of that analysis. The panel will identify the many steps the project manager should take when terminating or being terminated, including communications, handling subcontractors, key contract clauses, use/ownership of the design documents, and alternatives to termination. In addition, the panel will address how to properly get the surety involved and what to expect if and when the surety takes over.

PLENARY SESSION 7

Fail to Plan? Plan to Fail: The Role of Project Planning and Scheduling in Project Management

This panel will address the significance of the project plan (including assembling the right team and foundational documents) for execution of the project, the importance of Critical Path Method (CPM) scheduling for managing both performance and risk during the life of the project (as well as forensically in formal dispute resolution), and how synchronizing the right team, documents, and schedule is the best way to ensure successful project delivery. This analysis will include the process on complex projects with multiple parties whose objectives may not be identical.
