2:00 – 3:15 pm	Plenary Session II - Trends Regarding Global Anti-Corruption Enforcement This panel will discuss many of the recent trends arising from the enforcement of anti-corruption laws by various governments around the world. The collaboration amongst many countries has resulted in significant investigations and resolutions, including joint monitorships. Although the U.S. historically originated most of the anti-corruption cases, matters are now also arising from aggressive enforcement by other countries. The World Bank's authority to refer investigative findings to national authorities without waiving its privileges and immunities has contributed to the heightened enforcement efforts by these other governments. Compliance programs and their elements have continued to play a key role in how matters are handled by the defense and resolved by governments in varying degrees. We will examine some of these elements, including the role of whistleblowers, confidential leaks, and due diligence. CONVENER: Tyler W.
