CYBER-ETHICS: EMERGING ISSUES & EVOLVING LAWS

Combatting cybercrime raises a host of ethical issues that corporate executives, government officials, and their legal advisors must address, preferably before an attack occurs. Our panel will address several of these issues, including:

- Legal and ethical obligations regarding when and how to report a breach and to whom;
- Ethics and limits of employee monitoring and big data collection and use;
- Duties, needs and potential downsides pertaining to private sector involvement in government surveillance efforts;
- Benefits, opportunities and constraints regarding public-private sector information-sharing and cooperation; and
- What self-help/affirmative defense measures are ethically permitted, and how far should companies be permitted to go to protect and defend their systems, and identify and pursue hackers?

This course is expected to qualify for 1.25 CLE Ethics credit hours in 60-minute states, and 1.5 CLE Ethics credit hours in 50-minute states. This transitional program is approved for both newly admitted and experienced attorneys in NY. Attorneys may be eligible to receive CLE credit through reciprocity or attorney self-submission in other states.
