CLE
The ABA directly applies for and ordinarily receives CLE credit for ABA programs in AK, AL, AR, AZ, CA, CO, CT, DE, GA, GU, HI, IA, IL, IN, KS, KY, LA, ME, MN, MS, MO, MP, MT, NH, NJ, NM, NV, NY, NC, ND, OH, OK, OR, PA, SC, TN, TX, UT, VT, VA, VI, WA, WI, and WV. These states sometimes do not approve a program for credit before the program occurs. This course is expected to qualify for 13.5 hours of CLE credit (including 6.25 hours of ethics credit, 5 hours of Elimination of Bias credit, and 6.25 hours of skills credit) in 60-minute states, and 16.2 hours of CLE credit (including 7.5 hours of ethics credit, 6 hours of Elimination of Bias credit, and 7.5 hours of skills credit) in 50-minute states. This transitional program is approved for both newly admitted and experienced attorneys in NY. Attorneys may be eligible to receive CLE credit through reciprocity or attorney self-submission in other states. For more information about CLE accreditation in your state, visit http://ambar.org/spring2019.

SCHOLARSHIPS
Scholarships to defray tuition expense for ABA programs are available upon application on a program-by-program, case-by-case basis. Preference will be given to public interest lawyers, government lawyers, full-time law professors, solo or small firm practitioners of limited means, and unemployed attorneys. Visit http://ambar.org/spring2019 for the link to the scholarship application. Applications are due by 5 pm ET on February 2, 2019; applications received after this date will not be considered. You will be notified of a decision prior to the early bird registration deadline. A minimum fee may be charged on all approved scholarship applications to defray expenses.

1360 - Reviving Party Engagement: Organizational Dispute Systems Design to Address the Opioid Crisis
Nicollet D2, 1st floor
10:45 AM - 12:00 PM
How has the opioid crisis impacted your community? Perhaps it faces an increased need for first responders and treatment providers or pressure on criminal dockets. However, many other systems are impacted: public schools; workplace assistance programs; Medicaid offices; worker’s compensation adjudications; grandparent caregivers; child protection investigators; and neonatal care units. How are you helping? Dispute resolution processes can manage some of the increased, and unexpected, challenges these organizations face. Intentional, thoughtful dispute systems design is essential in times of crisis. This session considers how ADR can help to address the opioid crisis.

SYMPOSIUM ONADR IN THE COURTS

1134 - "Trust the Process?" Understanding and Learning from Party Perceptions of Court-Connected ADR Programs 10:45 AM - 12:00 PM
Nicollet D3, 1st floor

Lawyers and parties approach court systems with preconceptions about what to expect. Those perceptions inform their willingness to attempt, appreciate, and create positive outcomes in court-connected ADR processes. What can court-connected programs do to build trust with potential participants? Drawing observations from joint projects with the Harvard Negotiation & Mediation Clinical Program (HNMCP), leaders of court-connected ADR programs will explore the ways parties receive messages – intended or unintended – about ADR. Together the panel and attendees will explore how messaging impacts experiences of access, quality, integrity, and effectiveness, and how court programs should consider and respond to such perceptions if they are to improve.

1009 - Ignorance is Not Bliss: Improving Parties' Awareness of ADR Options 1:30 PM - 2:45 PM
Nicollet D3, 1st floor

Do parties know about the court-sponsored ADR programs that are available to them? Find out about the large-scale empirical research project designed to answer this question. Spoiler: the results are disheartening. On the bright side, the study also found that litigant awareness of court-sponsored programs had noteworthy implications - for example, litigants had more favorable views of their court when they knew it offered mediation. Audience members will brainstorm ideas for how lawyers and courts can improve litigants’ awareness of ADR programs so that those who could get justice through these options know about them, and know how to access them.

1071 - Revisiting the National Standards for Court Connected Mediation Programs

Nicollet D3, 1st floor

3:00 PM - 4:15 PM

The National Standards for Court Connected Mediation Programs were developed by leading ADR thinkers a quarter century ago, during the infancy of court connected mediation. They address many critical topics including access to mediation; qualifications, selection, and compensation of mediators; ethical standards; inappropriate pressure to settle; and enforceability of mediated agreements, and served as a basis for court mediation programs across the country. The panelists and participants in this session will explore how well the 1992 National Standards have withstood the test of time and ways in which the evolution of court connected mediation might make updated standards for court connected mediation programs beneficial.

The aging population is increasing. As baby boomers become elders, families in conflict turn to the court to make decisions. The court is ill-suited to resolve non-legal feuds that overshadow elders' needs. Elder mediation is an effective ADR option for disputes involving underlying non-legal family conflict in most cases. For high-conflict cases, eldercaring coordination has developed to manage family dynamics and resolve issues pertaining to an elder's care. This intermediate-level program is appropriate for judges, attorneys, mediators, and probate/mental health professionals and will use an interactive format to inform on elder ADR options to meet high-conflict probate litigation trends.

In civil disputes, mediators often encourage advocates to submit pre-mediation statements. These narratives are meant to educate the mediator on the most pressing factual and legal disputes between the parties before the session. Yet litigators have almost no useful guidance on drafting such statements. Unlike many legal documents – pleadings, motions, and settlement agreements – there are no standard templates or specific requirements on their form or substance. Neither law schools nor law firms provide much training on drafting pre-mediation statements, which are considered a fairly niche genre of legal writing. Indeed, mediators themselves, as well as administering organizations, often provide little direction to advocates. Now that mediation has become firmly embedded into our litigation culture, it is time for litigators to embrace some concrete “best practices,” and time for mediators to clarify those best practices. This session will explore the industry consensus on pre-mediation statements, and solicit audience participation on their own views.

1037 - Mediating Through Different Lenses: How Master Mediators Blend Law, Psychology and Business Perspectives

Skyway Room, 2nd floor

This highly interactive workshop – a tribute to the movies Rashomon and Inside Out – will view and analyze a single fact pattern of a dispute from multiple perspectives. Together we will explore how vastly different the same fact pattern can look when the mediator views the facts through a legal lens, a psychological lens, a business lens, and then finally a problem-solving lens. We will also explore how viewing this dispute through these different lenses can yield a measurably better outcome for the participants, as well as a better process along the way, resulting in higher user satisfaction rates.

1076 - Playing with Fire – The Challenges of Mediating Sexual Harassment and Gender Discrimination Claims in the #Me Too and #Times Up Culture
Lakeshore B/C, 1st floor

The seismic and public reckoning that has unfolded in the aftermath of the Harvey Weinstein fallout is ushering in a new world order for the workplace. Where employees have initiated legal claims (or demand letters) against their employer alleging sexual harassment or gender discrimination, unique challenges lie ahead when parties consider mediating such disputes. This esteemed panel will dive into this hot topic with cogent and timely insights. 1099 - I Know You Want to "Beat the Heck Out of 'Em" and that "Money Doesn't Matter," But... How to Save Parties from Themselves in Construction Arbitration
Mirage Room, 2nd floor

Too often counsel and arbitrators in construction arbitrations lose sight of the true interests of the parties, becoming bound up in their discrete roles in the process. A Hint: It's not our money on the line, it's the parties.' This interactive program, through the use of short videos, panel discussions, and audience participation, will focus on the management of parties and their realistic (and not so realistic) expectations at various stages of arbitration, including (i) the initial decision to arbitrate, (ii) once a dispute arises, (iii) during the pre-Hearing exchange of information; iv) at the Hearing, and (v) post-Hearing.

1015 - It's Not About Me?? Family Law Mediator Biases and Distractions as Barriers to Effective Party Participation
Nicollet D1, 1st floor

Nowhere do the challenges of mediator distraction and bias emerge more pointedly than in divorce mediation, where the mediator’s personal experiences and feelings and unconscious biases operate so strongly. Unlike commercial cases where the personal perspectives of the mediators rarely are triggered by the actions and positions of the parties, family law disputes typically raise issues of fairness, blame, fidelity and finances in ways that are often directly connected to the personal histories of the mediator. This panel will explore the many ways these challenges emerge in family law mediation, and will offer practical strategies for overcoming these challenges to meet the needs of the parties. The presenters include a novelist (who will read an excerpt from her novel focused on the personal life of a family law mediator), a therapist/lawyer mediator team who also are married to each other, and a gay family law mediator who specializes in resolving same-sex marital and cohabitation disputes.

1017 - Mediating Directly with the Parties in Healthcare
Greenway C

Disputes between healthcare providers and others (payors, patients, suppliers) are increasingly resolved through ADR. But what about conflicts within healthcare organizations? Mediation can address conflicts directly among parties, well before attorneys are involved. This session describes mediation and facilitated conversations in varying internal healthcare settings: administration versus medical staff of a healthcare corporation; faculty-faculty conflict in an academic medical center; provider-patient treatment disputes and intra-family conflicts. Panelists' stories will show how this type of mediation (1) differs from that used in resolving external disputes which often result in litigation; (2) the evolution of innovative approaches to intra organizational dispute resolution; and (3) how healthcare counsel can promote in-house conflict resolution processes.

1032 - Say What? Arbitrator Disclosures – What Arbitrators Should Disclose, What Counsel Should Do with Disclosures, and Why It Matters
Nicolette D3, 1st floor

This program is presented by the American Arbitration Association (AAA), a Diamond Sponsor of the 2019 Spring Conference.

Arbitrators have an obligation to disclose certain information to the arbitration parties and counsel. Arbitrators, however, often differ on what information they disclose in any specific case, whether for fear of garnering an objection, an incomplete conflicts check or memory, or other reasons. For their part, counsel don’t always know what to do with arbitrator disclosures, particularly ones that raise more questions than they answer. Using examples from actual arbitration cases, the panelists will focus on what an arbitrator should disclose, what counsel and their clients can and should do with disclosures, and the potential ramifications of disclosures.

1040 - Increase Transparency and Trust in the Mediation Process: Learn to Use The Visual Mediation Agenda Template
Greenway B, 2nd floor

What if in the early stages of a mediation, parties could see a map of the dynamics that would affect engagement later on? With a Visual Mediation Agenda, they can. The presenter will show exactly how to use the Visual Mediation Agenda Template in any mediation to quickly engage parties in setting the structural foundation for a successful mediation. By creating this bird’s eye view of the mediation, a mediator can increase the parties’ trust in the mediation process which will assist in increasing their confidence level during the mediation. Who should attend this session? Any one interested in taking a BIG leap in working visually in a mediation will benefit from the guidance and tips provided during this unique session. All participants will receive a FREE copy of the Mediator’s Step-by-Step Guide and the Visual Mediation Agenda Template. This session is suited for all practitioners working in mediation, regardless of experience level.

1106 - Can Dispute Resolution React? Perspective on Collaborative Initiatives to Address Community Division and Intervention in the Face of Social Crisis
Mirage Room, 2nd floor

1:30 PM - 2:45 PM

More than 50 years ago Congress Established the Community Relations Service to serve as "America's Peacemaker" for "community conflict." Today, activists organize quickly; DOJ has a new wave of leadership; and new organizations support reactive work while communities seek to proactively address community division. This interactive session will explore institutional and participant perspectives on dispute resolution intervention in social crisis while highlighting initiatives which proactively address community division.

1136 - Clicking Confidential: Practical Guidance to Protect Cybersecurity and Ensure Cross-Border Data Privacy Compliance in Arbitration
Greenway H, 2nd floor

1:30 PM - 2:45 PM

With hacking incidents constantly in the news and well-publicized examples of cybersecurity breaches involving law firms and in arbitrations, parties and counsel are increasingly focused on the need to implement reasonable cybersecurity measures to protect information exchanged in the arbitration process. Less is known about solutions: the reasonably accessible measures that can be undertaken in individual matters to protect the legitimate confidentiality expectations of arbitration users. This program will focus on filling that gap with practical, implementable advice, presented in a lively format that will illustrate how the planning and implementation of reasonable cybersecurity measures can unfold.

1025 - Diversity Matters Make Meaningful Mediations: Lessons Learned at the EEOC
Greenway A, 2nd floor
3:00 PM - 4:15 PM

As the EEOC enters its 20th year of providing mediation services for employment discrimination disputes, the panelists reflect on the success of the largest national mediation program focused on the private sector. In these two decades, over 220,000 successful mediations were conducted, resulting in a recovery of over $2 billion in monetary benefits for claimants. New laws, evolving socio-cultural norms and new expectations of workplace civility have posed new challenges for both employees and employers in the workplace. Regional EEOC managers and mediators will discuss the many lessons learned in meeting these growing needs of parties involved in employment discrimination disputes. Panelists will explore a myriad of "hot topics" that mediators face when resolving disputes involving racial discrimination, ADA accommodations and sexual harassment in the #MeToo Movement era and offer practical tips for how to prepare for these mediations.

3:00 PM – 4:15 PM

This session will introduce specific novel, consensual resolution processes and the ways in which these can be implemented in the healthcare system. These processes include the participation of an impartial physician in early, structured resolution processes before the dispute has escalated and the parties are dug in. The objective is to substantially reduce cost and reach better outcomes with less risk than customary litigation or late stage mediation. This session will provide examples of new approaches to help transform disputes from burdens to patient safety and business opportunities. 1063 - “Hard” Tools for Controlling Discovery Burdens In Arbitration
10:15 AM - 11:30 AM

Arbitration (and American arbitration in particular) has received increasing criticism, based largely on the contention that arbitration too closely resembles conventional litigation, producing undue burden and costs. Chief among the criticisms is the view that discovery (particularly discovery of electronic information, or "ediscovery") is largely uncontrolled, undermining efforts to promote arbitration as a speedy and economical alternative to litigation. This presentation suggests an alternate array of "hard" tools for controlling discovery burdens, which do not depend upon the discretion of the arbitrator. Through the adoption of one or more of these "hard" tools, parties can focus and streamline discovery processes, to increase the predictability of discovery obligations in arbitration, and reduce disputes about the application of proportionality rules.

1012 - Follow the Money: Ethical Practices for ADR Providers and Neutrals When a Participant is Receiving Third-Party Funding

Greenway BC, 2nd floor

Third-party funding is a growing phenomenon in which a non-party entity finances the legal representation of a party to a dispute in exchange for a portion of the recovered money, if the funded party wins. As the cost of justice increases, so does the likelihood that a participant in the dispute resolution process is receiving third-party funding. Too often, however, ADR providers and neutrals are unaware that one or both of the participants are receiving such funding. Even though disclosure about funding is fundamental to maintaining the transparency and integrity of dispute resolution, ADR providers and neutrals do not require disclosure of financial funding as a regular part of the dispute resolution practice. This program will explore what disclosures should be made about the third-party funder and how this disclosure might impact the conflicts, control, confidentiality and communication of the dispute resolution processes.

1062 - In Mediation, You Gotta Have (Good) Faith!
Lakeshore A, 1st floor

10:15 AM - 11:30 AM

This program is presented by NAM (National Arbitration and Mediation), a Diamond Sponsor of the 2019 Spring Conference.

As a mediator, trust is a critical element in any successful negotiation. However, in an adversarial negotiation trust is a relative concept to the parties to the mediation. You may never come to fully trust your adversary, but that doesn't mean parties can't mutually engage in a good faith negotiation process – a simple and honest approach that is often derailed by looking to gain an advantage. Many good faith negotiations are sabotaged by parties using a variety of bad faith negotiation tactics, many of which are repeated all too often and can ultimately prevent a settlement. By shining a light on the parties to the mediation, this CLE program will shed light on what those tactics are and what can be done to ameliorate the situation.

1060 - Community Conversations: A Case Study of Falcon Heights
Nicollet D2/D3

10:15 AM - 11:30 AM

On July 6, 2016, Philando Castile (an African American male), was shot and killed by a police officer after being pulled over. The shooting took place in Falcon Heights and the community was shocked and outraged. In response, the City Council established a Task Force on Inclusion and Policing to 1) articulate community values; 2) identify community needs; and 3) recommend programming and policies that would make Falcon Heights a more inclusive and welcoming place for residents and guests. To help develop the recommendations on policing and inclusion, the City Council worked with a consortium of professors of public engagement and conflict resolution to convene five community conversations. Another goal of these conversations was to promote healing. The project was funded in part by a grant form the American Arbitration Association Foundation. The conference session will include a participant in the community conversations who experienced a transformation from the trauma of losing his friend to becoming a productive advocate for justice.

In these challenging times, colleges and universities are struggling to manage, resolve and prevent conflict. Instances of sexual assault and harassment on college and university campuses continue to occur in ever increasing numbers with grave consequences for all parties involved. Higher education is also affected by conflicts that affect non-academic institutions, but the context of these disputes, many of which are human resources-related, are unique within colleges and universities. Join a panel of experts for a vibrant discussion on the current state of conflict resolution in higher education and learn how to take your own steps to develop a practice in this this rapidly developing area.

Emergency and interim relief are vastly underutilized tools that can assist in compelling arbitration, maintaining the status quo, preventing destruction and compelling production of evidence, and preserving assets. Issues on obtaining and enforcing such relief abound. Should emergency and interim relief be sought from a court or a tribunal, and do emergency arbitrator procedures preclude a court from granting emergency relief? What steps must be followed and what circumstances justify such relief? What are the consequences if an emergency or interim order is improperly granted, and what security can be required to mitigate those consequences? How can such an order be effectively enforced? This panel of U.S. and international counsel and arbitrators will address these issues and provide creative approaches to enhance the ability of new and seasoned practitioners to take full advantage of the availability of emergency and interim relief.

1031 - Co-Mediation: Not Just Training Wheels for Inexperienced Mediators
1:15 PM - 2:30 PM
Lakeshore B/C, 1st floor

Co-mediation originated as a way to train new mediators; to support them as they learned and sharpened their skills. Co-mediation is now being used by experienced mediators to resolve complex or multi-party disputes. This session will discuss the benefits of co-mediation and introduce a variety of co-mediation tools and will also address some of the potential ethical dilemmas that may arise in co-mediation. The presenters will discuss the benefits and challenges of co-mediation and share ideas regarding best practices and safeguards that may be necessary for high-conflict participants.

The 2017-18 and 2018-19 terms of the Supreme Court include four arbitration cases which have the potential to shape not only arbitration law but also how clients utilize arbitration in the future. Last May’s Epic Systems case is already a potential landmark decision in the area of employment arbitration, and the three cases set for 2018-19 deal with the important issues of arbitrability, class actions, and arbitration of independent contractor claims.

1:15 PM - 2:30 PM
Mirage Room, 2nd floor

This session will demonstrate how mediators and lawyers can "climb [decision] trees" with parties to facilitate settlement decisions. The session will focus on how and when decision trees can be used within the mediation process to move parties' psychological anchors, reduce partisan biases and loss perceptions, and improve communication around numbers and case assessments. Best practices for mediators to elicit estimates of probability, outcome ranges, and costs as well as tangible or intangible party impacts will be discussed. The session will illustrate how the visuals of a tree can help parties understand and think through the litigation alternative and settlement choices. Panelists will explore and recommend when and how decision trees and risk trees can be introduced within the mediation process to reinforce perceived mediator neutrality, while increasing chances of settlement.

Mediators often find themselves facing ethical conundrums that can undermine confidence in the process. This innovative program profiles panel members acting out ethical dilemmas as a catalyst to discuss and interpret the Model Standards of Conduct for Mediators and recent opinions issued by the Committee on Mediator Ethical Guidance, which construe those Standards. By the end of the program, attendees should be better equipped to understand and resolve intricate ethical challenges. Topics to be covered include: concealment of information in caucus, mediation and social media, conflicts of interest, and overreaching behavior by a participant.

Humor is not widely recognized as a useful tactic in conflict resolution. This workshop is aimed at providing an analysis of the functions of humor in negotiation activities. There will be some serious comments about the concepts of humor followed by humorous video clips leading to a discussion-generated list of advantages and disadvantages of using humor in practice. Finally, suggestions will be provided on how to incorporate humor to promote successful collaboration.

1089 - Diversity and Inclusion in ADR: Are We Doing Enough?
Lakeshore A, 1st floor

Women, minorities and other traditionally marginalized segments of the ADR community are loudly demanding placement on ADR rosters and appointment as neutrals. Many of the larger ADR providers such as AAA, JAMS and CPR have heeded this call and implemented programs and strategies to ensure more diversity in the composition of their rosters and in the eventual selection of neutrals. This session will focus on the initiatives devised and undertaken by these ADR providers and examine the success of their efforts in promoting diversity. It will explore whether more needs to be done to achieve diversity and what other initiatives may be implemented moving forward to ensure greater parity in the inclusion of marginalized segments of the ADR professional community.

1092 - Evidence-Based Guidance for Child Protection Mediation Programs
Greenway FG, 2nd floor

When children are brought into the child welfare system due to abuse or neglect, a complex chain of events is triggered. Court-connected child protection mediation can provide an opportunity for parents, lawyers and social workers to chart a path forward for children and deal with issues that impede progress, but it is a complicated process that must meet the sometimes contradictory needs of the different parties. In this session, the results of comprehensive evaluations of very different programs in Chicago and Washington, DC, will be discussed, offering evidence-based program design guidance to those considering programs and those currently operating one.

Greenway FG, 2nd floor

2:45 PM - 4:00 PM

This program constitutes a blue ribbon panel of in-house general counsel and senior litigation counsel from major companies. David Singer will moderate an open discussion focusing on: the preferred timing of mediations; what counsel look for in their selection of mediators; repeat players; and the extent and nature of pre-mediation sharing of information and negotiation and conducting the mediation. Discussions will also include the utility of group vs. caucus sessions; usefulness of techniques such as mediator's proposal; openness to converting a mediation into an arbitration with the mediator then serving as arbitrator; openness to online mediation and other issues. Participants will have an opportunity to vent their frustrations and pet peeves regarding mediation.

1039 - Times Up for Increasing ADR Diversity: The Role of In-House and Outside Counsel in the Diversity Mosaic

Nicollet D1, 1st floor

2:45 PM - 4:00 PM

Panelists will examine the latest developments by ADR provider organizations and the ABA to help increase diversity in ADR. ABA Resolution 105, which passed the House of Delegates last year, urges ADR providers to diversify their rosters and encourage the selection of diverse neutrals. Data demonstrates that diversity in the Dispute Resolution field is significantly below that of the legal profession as a whole and shows that qualified diverse neutrals are less likely to be selected. An "Old Boy's" network-based culture reinforced by implicit bias and a selection process cloaked in confidentiality exacerbates the diversity problem in neutral selection. The magic key to unlock the problem of diversity in ADR resides with the end user – the disputants.

While businesses now aspire to operate at the speed of light, the Business Bar too often is satisfied to merely trim a month or two off of the lengthy, expensive process of dispute resolution. The Business Bar – and the neutrals serving them – need to up their game. EDR proposes a disciplined, deadline-driven, 4-step process (initial evaluation; information exchange; case assessment and damages; negotiation or mediation), supported by comprehensive protocols addressing ethics and implementation, to resolve disputes in 30 days (or more when experts are needed). This program describes the full process and the protocols used, and shows its implementation in the context of a high-profile dispute.

1057 - Quick to Caucus - Is it for You or for Them? Helping Mediators Make Informed and Intentional Decisions
Mirage Room, 2nd floor

Do you meet with participants separately as part of your regular mediation practice? If so, why? When? And for how long? The trend has been to move to caucus earlier and longer, but should we? Research shows that caucusing increases the likelihood that they will like and trust YOU, the mediator. Great, right? However, research also reveals that they are less likely to trust each other and more likely to feel like they cannot resolve conflicts on their own. That's not so great. Based on research, this highly interactive skill-building and self-reflective session offers the opportunity to identify ethical considerations and challenges with caucusing and discuss tools and techniques needed to keep participants in the room together, thereby supporting their conversation and opportunity to resolve conflicts on their own. Join us as we grow together in this experiential session!

1065 - When Experts Come from Different Planets: Strategies and Techniques for Reconciling Seemingly Irreconcilable Expert Evidence in Arbitration
Skyway A/B

Expert opinion evidence is a necessary part of many arbitrations that involve technical subject matter. Parties and their counsel have an incentive to push their experts to extremes in support of their positions. It can then be difficult to resolve the matter because the experts have not provided sufficient, adequate, or even the correct information from which to reach the right result. This program explores tools that both arbitrators and advocates can use to help find the common ground in seemingly irreconcilable expert testimony. These tools can help arbitrators analyze expert evidence to identify the real points of controversy and reach the correct result on the merits.

1091 - Framing a Culture of Resolution: A Cross-Cultural Exploration of Resolving Workplace Conflict in New Zealand and the United States

Lakeshore B/C, 1st floor

2:45 PM - 4:00 PM

The uniqueness of New Zealand’s workplace landscape creates both challenges and opportunities for mediators, ombudspersons and restorative practice facilitators, but the conflict issues that people deal with at work are often the same the world over. What drives an employee’s experience in resolving workplace conflict, particularly harassment and bullying issues? What can we learn from each other? This session delves into how New Zealand’s bi-cultural nature, it’s employment laws and customs, and its unique challenges due to size and location compare to workplace conflict resolution in the United States. Focusing on what parties expect and how they perceive the experience, this session delivers useful insights and perspectives that will benefit practitioners regardless of where and how they practice.

1093 - Dispute Review Boards – A Client-Driven Process: What You Need To Know About DRBs To Be An Effective ADR Advocate

2:45 PM - 4:00 PM

This program provides ADR professionals, who may be unaware of the innovative impact DRB’s have on resolving construction disputes, with an understanding of the basics of the process and how they can incorporate DRB’s in their problem solving toolkit. Panelists will discuss the goals of the process, the selection of the panel of neutrals, the roles played by the parties in the dispute resolution process and how parties can identify and successfully resolve potential claims. 1095 - Who are the Clients in Dispute System Design? - The Impact of Context and Culture
Greenway Hl, 2nd floor
2:45 PM – 4:00 PM

In our multi-cultural world, we can better address differences if designers tailor systems to meet parties’ interests. Dispute resolution professionals are in a unique position to foster client-centered design. But who are the clients and how best can professionals serve them in dispute system design (DSD)? This session examines these questions across the policy continuum in three contexts and cultures: California’s court system, Indiana public engagement, and foreign direct investment in Peru. It will explore what dispute resolvers can do to better understand their clients and use this to design culturally and contextually appropriate dispute resolution processes and systems.

When it comes to improving the criminal justice system, our field (which emphasizes conflict management, process innovation, paradigm shifts, and large-scale reform) has a great deal to offer. But pivoting from the civil side to the criminal side presents a number of theoretical and practical challenges, especially given the tenets of civil ADR practice: self-determination of the parties, informed consent, neutrality, the ability to walk away, the availability of broad discovery in litigation, privacy/confidentiality, and so on. Greenway HI, 2nd floor

This facilitated discussion is a joint search for mismatches: between the way we teach mediation and what our students may encounter or require in practice, and between what we teach and what clients may actually desire. Focusing on the conference's theme, we pre-identify two party-centric mismatches spotlighted recently: between the facilitative approach commonly taught, and the evaluative approach many parties desire; between the dialog-based approach commonly taught, and some parties’ preference for caucus-heavy processes. Are there ramifications of such mismatches for our teaching? What other mismatches exist? Our teaching can only benefit from a candid reflective conversation on this topic.

This session examines how today’s climate of heightened sensitivity around issues of trauma, race, sex, gender identity, socio-economics, and politics poses new questions for simulations as a teaching tool. Examples of these challenges include: How to make simulations reflect real life without reinforcing stereotypes or oversimplifying complex dynamics? What if role assignments trigger a traumatic experience for a particular student? In this interactive session, participants will closely examine role-play as a teaching tool, consider new dynamics raised (or mishandled) by simulations, and take away practical strategies for navigating this new territory and reinvigorating their use of role-plays.

1033 - Shining the Light on Parties by not Casting our own Shadows – Bringing Meaningful Reflexive Practice into Collaborative Processes (and the Classroom)

Greenway HI, 2nd floor

Intervenors are admonished to remain impartial – if not “neutral” – so as to permit the process to focus on the parties themselves. However, impartiality, let alone neutrality, is difficult (if not impossible) to achieve, particularly as we increasingly recognize the diverse and global nature of our field. In order to shine a light on parties to conflict, intervenors need to deepen our awareness and develop habits where we do not – even inadvertently – cast our own shadows on the parties or their process. This session introduces insights and practical tools to minimize the shadows we cast, creating a space where the parties can shine.
