U.S. Treaty Reports

United Nations human rights treaties require States Parties to report periodically on their implementation of their treaty obligations. For the United States, these reports are large and complex undertakings, involving substantial coordination with relevant U.S. Government agencies in the writing of book-length submissions. As of the spring of 2006, the United States is up to date on all of its reports. As of 2011, the United States has submitted the following treaty reports (and related documents):

International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR)

State Party as of September 8, 1992 [treaty text]

Convention On the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination (CERD)

State Party as of November 20, 1994 [treaty text]

State Party as of January 23, 2003 [treaty text]

Convention Against Torture and Other Forms of Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (CAT)

State Party as of November 20, 1994 [treaty text]
