Digital News Coverage of the Legal Profession: Evolution or Revolution?

Like every other aspect of our personal and professional lives, legal news and information is now instantly online 24/7. With the growth of blogs, news services, Twitter, and smart phone apps, breaking news emerges real-time in the palm of your hand. Along with the increased volume of information, there is a lot more noise and less editorial control. Join our panel of experts and gain new insights into the implications of digital news coverage. What does all this mean for the delivery and consumption of legal news and information? Is it really better than the traditional newspaper or magazine? These and other questions will be explored by our diverse panel of speakers representing the broad spectrum of legal news reporting.

Allen Pusey, Editor and Publisher, ABA Journal, Chicago, IL
Matthew Ingram, Senior Writer, GigaOm, Toronto, ON
David Lat, Founder and Managing Editor, Above the Law, New York, NY

A New Era: The Trends, Benefits, and Risks in Legal Outsourcing

Please join our all-star panel to discuss an emerging trend in the legal profession: sending elements of the representation outside the firm. We will explore the world of contract attorneys, legal outsourcing services, professional document reviewers, and e-discovery experts. The use of these individuals and companies in the course of representation can be very cost effective, but also raises issues such as the duty to supervise, confidentiality, competence, conflicts, and billing. Our panel includes four very different perspectives: an in-house attorney, a partner in a large law firm, an ethicist, and an executive in the outsourcing industry who previously founded one of the pioneer legal process outsourcing companies. The session promises to give insight into the cutting edge issues related to outsourcing. Join us to get up to speed on this hot topic and the risks and benefits it presents.

In the Trustee’s Backyard: Defending Attorneys against Trustee Claims

With bankruptcies on the rise, attorneys increasingly find themselves named as defendants in claims by bankruptcy trustees. What can these attorneys anticipate when faced with this situation, and what steps should they have taken beforehand to best protect themselves? Hear from a diverse panel representing the perspectives of defense counsel, carriers, and bankruptcy trustees, and learn how to reduce risk and level the playing field for attorneys defending trustee claims.

A Day in the Life of a Tablet Litigator

Tablet devices like the iPad® are now part of the litigator’s standard technology arsenal. And they’re not just for going to court; a tablet can be a useful tool at many stages of a legal matter, including preparation, research, strategy, and presentation, providing mobility and easy access to documents in the palm of your hand. With internet access and thousands of apps, you can work from a remote location as if you were at your desk. Bring your tablet to this hands-on session and follow along to see how it fits into a litigator’s typical day. You will take away loads of helpful app suggestions and an understanding of how you can become a tablet litigator.

As leading practitioners recognize, mastering the field of lawyer professional liability requires staying on top of the latest legal developments. This session is your opportunity to learn about recent decisions from a seasoned panel of legal malpractice practitioners. The panelists will highlight emerging trends and discuss how these recent decisions may impact future evaluation, strategy, and defense of legal malpractice claims.

Into the Mind of the Broker

The professional liability insurance broker plays an essential role by ensuring that a law firm has insurance sufficient to cover its foreseeable exposure to malpractice claims. Learn from veteran brokers about managing the process. Topics will include the application and underwriting process, the challenges of working with “distressed firms,” criteria for evaluating competing insurance proposals, and negotiating price and coverage terms. The panel will also field a “no holds barred” lightning round of questions posed by underwriters, which promises to be an entertaining finish to this informative session.

Grey Matters: The Effect of the Aging, Impaired Attorney on Malpractice Claims and Grievances

As the Baby Boom generation begins entering retirement age, the rising tide of age-related issues affecting lawyers will become a matter of increasing concern for law firms and their liability insurance carriers. This session will examine the neuroscience and legal implications of aging, and attendees will learn from a diverse panel of experts about the intricate problems associated with age-related impairments. Topics include how law firms should prepare for these issues, including a look at firm retirement policies, and how to deal with age-related disciplinary issues. The panel will also provide guidance on how to understand when you or a colleague may have an impairment problem and solutions based upon the guidance offered by the rules of professional responsibility and developments in the law.

Breakout Sessions

[Image]
Failing to identify and resolve ethical issues within a law firm can result in claims, disciplinary action, and lost business. The ever-changing landscape of law practice presents lawyers with ethical conundrums never imagined fifty years ago. Attendees will learn from experienced general counsel as they discuss the difficulties in navigating such matters as cross-border conflicts, workplace email usage, social media policies, attorney-client privilege for the firm when continuing to represent the client, and a myriad of topical ethical issues.

Antonia B. Ianniello, Partner, Steptoe & Johnson LLP, Washington, D.C.
Charlotte Moses Fischman, Partner and General Counsel, Kramer Levin Naftalis & Frankel LLP, New York, NY
Gerard E. Harper, Partner, Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison LLP, New York, NY
Martin I. Kaminsky, General Counsel, Greenberg Traurig, New York, NY

Outside the Box: Non-Traditional Means of Resolving Legal Malpractice Cases

Views vary widely on the advisability of arbitrating or mediating disputes with clients. As litigation costs, insurance retentions, and multinational practices continue to grow, insurers and law firms are taking a new look at litigation alternatives that have been both disfavored and difficult to engineer in disputes between attorneys and their clients. Gain the perspectives from practitioners, the insurance industry, and ADR veterans of the pros and cons of using ADR to resolve malpractice claims and fee disputes, the particular circumstances under which certain types of ADR might be more desirable than traditional litigation, and how to maximize the potential for cost savings that various ADR mechanisms can (but don’t always) deliver.

Frederick B. Warder, III, Partner, Patterson Belknap Webb & Tyler LLP, New York, NY
Jimmy Biondolillo, Claim Zone Technician, Chubb Group of Insurance Companies, Simsbury, CT
Robert K. Sall, Shareholder, The Sall Law Firm, Laguna Beach, CA

Till Death Do Us Part: Representing an Attorney in a Matrimonial Matter

Matrimonial cases can be a rich source of complaints against lawyers. Whether claiming malpractice, excessive fees or abandonment, seeking to change lawyers or filing disciplinary charges, matrimonial clients may express extreme dissatisfaction in the representation, spelling trouble for the lawyer involved. By examining the kinds of claims made against lawyers in the matrimonial context, this session will help lawyers and their insurers protect themselves against angry clients. Attendees will learn from hypotheticals and draw on the experience of malpractice and matrimonial practitioners to get to the root causes of these claims from the perspective of both the lawyer and the client.

State of the Insurance Market

Join in the conversation as veteran insurance professionals discuss the latest trends and developments in the lawyer professional liability marketplace, with topics ranging from underwriting, reinsurance, claims trends, market conditions, and more. You will come away from this session with a perspective on what the latest insurance market developments may mean for your law firm or agency, and with a broad perspective on the current state of the market and a glimpse of where the industry might be headed in the next few years. Bring your own questions for consideration in this interactive and open forum.
