Berkley Select specializes in underwriting professional liability insurance with a narrow emphasis on large law firms and large accounting firms. Its products are distributed nationwide through a limited number of brokers. Berkley Select is staffed with a team of experts with over 90 years of combined insurance industry experience with specific focus on Legal and Accounting Professional Liability. Berkley Select utilizes individual risk underwriting, loss control, and collaborative claims practices to provide superior products and services to its customers. Berkley Select clients have access to a creative team of dedicated underwriters and the financial strength of W.R. Berkley Corporation.

ALAS was founded in 1979 by its owner-insured law firms to provide a superior source of insurance coverage and a level of service that cannot be replicated in the commercial marketplace. Today, ALAS is the country’s largest lawyer-owned mutual, insuring more than 210 premium law firms with over 61,000 lawyers located around the world. Unlike commercial carriers, ALAS is managed and staffed by lawyers, most of whom are former partners at ALAS-caliber firms. These professionals leverage their unique blend of industry knowledge and real-world experience to provide a full complement of services to their firms. ALAS manages claims in the best interests of its firms and provides industry-leading loss prevention and law firm management services.

Winning At All Cost: Can We Compete Equitably By Following the Rules?

Known to many as the person who exposed Lance Armstrong and the U.S. Postal Service cycling team doping program, Travis Tygart, CEO of the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency (USADA), will discuss the realities of competition in a high-stakes environment like international sports and transcendence in the legal field. In his fifteen years at USADA, Tygart has also served as the Director of Legal Affairs and as Senior Managing Director & General Counsel, prosecuting cases on behalf of clean athletes before the American Arbitration Association and the Court of Arbitration for Sport. In this session, Tygart will discuss the ethical implications and consequences athletes face when they are found to be in violation of these rules, how these cases parallel unethical behavior and misconduct in the legal profession, and the lessons that can be learned by the rest of us who do play by the rules. He will also address new challenges faced by the agency, such as dealing with cybersecurity vulnerabilities and Russian hackers.

Artificial Intelligence and the Coming Age of the Superhuman Lawyer

Artificial intelligence (A.I.) is changing the way lawyers think, the way they do business, and the way they interact with clients. Artificial intelligence is more than legal technology; it is a paradigm shift in how legal work is done. Software designers are now creating programs to use data to predict litigation and reduce the time needed for e-discovery and document review, because the software searches for concepts as opposed to simple keywords, allowing lawyers to focus on higher value tasks. While this is exciting and new, it is not without risk. This panel of experts will explore the current state of A.I. used in law firms and corporate legal departments, its anticipated impact on the legal profession, how it may play a role in ethics and legal malpractice, and what action should be taken to be prepared for the future of A.I. The future is here. Are you ready?

Breakout 1

Breaking Up is Hard to Do

Law firms are operating in an intensely competitive landscape. The imperative for survival and the drive for growth are leading more firms to breakup and/or for attorneys to switch firms. But breaking up is hard to do: When co-owners of a business break up, they are subject to a variety of contractual, common law (fiduciary), and statutory obligations, and lawyers are subject to additional duties imposed by the Rules of Professional Conduct. Those duties run not only between the lawyers and their clients, but among the lawyers themselves. Session attendees will learn best practices (the “do’s and don’ts”) involved in these breakups, along with the insurance obligations that come along with any split.

Young Professionals Session: Pick me! Pick me!

Most young lawyers spend the first few years of their practice learning how to be a lawyer. However, in order to take the next step in their legal careers, young lawyers need to get their own clients, which also involves a learning process in terms of client development and marketing. This panel of experts will discuss what concrete steps young lawyers can take to make themselves attractive to clients and retain work. The panel will also discuss how insurance companies select counsel, either through a formal panel process or otherwise, and what steps young lawyers can take to put themselves in the best position to be selected.

Ashley Eiler, Consulting Counsel, Wiley Rein, Washington, DC (Moderator)

Breakout 3

Crisis Management: Sword or Shield?

Crisis management has grown exponentially since the 1980s when incidents such as the Bhopal disaster served as a catalyst for coordinated legal and reputational responses to such incidents. Data breach and other technological crises have opened new frontiers of crisis preparedness. Public interest and thus potential reputational damage have been fueled by heightened and hair-trigger coverage of client legal problems in social media. In recent years the crisis communication process has come under attack as adversaries attempt to use the client’s response itself as a litigation weapon. The program will cover crisis preparedness. for law firms and their clients. In light of conflicting case law, best practices on how to maximize the effectiveness of the response and minimize the risk the response itself will be used against the client will be discussed.

Secondary Actor Liability for Lawyers Under State Securities Statutes
While lawyers and accountants are generally shielded from liability for federal securities fraud under Central Bank of Denver and Stoneridge, most state securities statutes do permit plaintiffs to sue attorneys for aiding and abetting securities fraud. Under “scheme liability,” secondary actors that engage in conduct that advances a scheme to mislead investors can be held liable to investors. These are often “bet-the-firm cases” for law firms and their insurers. In this program, a panel of experts will discuss the broad definition of a security under the Uniform Securities Act, common theories of liability and defenses, insurance coverage implications, and resolution strategies.

Master Class in Attorney Mal Mediations: Select Topics for the Expert
Law firm dynamics at mediation and differing motivations for the partner defendant, the managing partner, and the general counsel result in tripartite relationship traps, challenges, and coverage dilemmas at mediation. This panel of mediation experts will explore these and other topics, including how the mediation privilege may be used as a sword or a shield in subsequent litigation; how to extract all the information you can from the mediator and the opposition at mediation; and common bidding strategies and mistakes. Ransomware Make You WannaCry?
Protecting the Confidential Information of Your Practice and Your Clients From CyberCriminals

On May 12, 2017, a new ransomware worm dubbed “WannaCry” started spreading quickly throughout the world. It has now been reported in more than 150 countries around the globe, affecting hundreds of thousands of networks and more than 10,000 companies. The increase in ransomware attacks as seen with WannaCry is alarming, and it is important for law firms to understand their vulnerabilities and take steps to be prepared. This program will address best practices in preparing for and responding to a ransomware attack, including the advance purchase of bitcoins, negotiating with cyber criminals, use of public decryption keys, implementing an incident response plan and team, containment, and remediation of an attack. Planning for business continuity, public relations, cyber liability coverage insurance and regulatory compliance will also be discussed.

The Risks of Managing a Firm Like a Business

Most law firms are starting to be managed more like businesses to meet declining demand, downward price pressure, and an oversupply of substitute providers. This business approach to law firm management imposes potential liability and legal malpractice risks on a firm as attempts are made to streamline processes and reduce overhead while still maintaining profit margins. Exposure can arise in a variety of ways, including laying off essential support staff, attrition of key partners and associates, a lack of attorney supervision and peer group review, failing to promote or train associates, decreasing or modifying attorney compensation, poor accounting practices, and the like. This session will address the most common management issues that contribute to a firm’s risk of a subsequent legal malpractice claim, explore how to reduce those risks, and describe how to insure against them.

EZ ESI: Hands-on Advice for Handling and Using ESI in a Legal Malpractice Claim

Everyone recognizes how important electronically stored information ("ESI") can be in a legal malpractice claim. An email, text message, Facebook post, or even an offhand comment to "Alexa" can make or break a case. When it comes to actually dealing with the logistics and practicalities of ESI, however, defense counsel and claims professionals often find themselves struggling to keep up with the latest e-discovery trends and technology. This session will explore the nuts and bolts of handling ESI in a legal malpractice claim, from preservation to collection to production. Attendees will walk away with a checklist of ESI-related action items to think through at the outset of any legal malpractice claim.

Shifting Ethical Standards

Several ethics rules and lawyer regulation standards are in the process of changing. New ABA Model Rule 8.4(g) (prohibiting conduct that a “lawyer knows or reasonably should know is harassment or discrimination...in conduct related to the practice of law”) has ignited great controversy in several states considering its adoption. A groundbreaking proposal to substantially modify the lawyer advertising rules will be considered by the ABA and many states in 2018. Meanwhile, appellate courts are now considering cases that could change other ethics-related concepts, including the law governing advance conflict waivers. This expert panel will explore the implications of all these shifting ethical standards and more.

Thursday Evening Reception at The Broadmoor’s Cheyenne Lodge ($85)

September 14, 5:30-7:30 p.m.

In 1893, Katharine Lee Bates spent a summer teaching at Colorado College in Colorado Springs. Her visit compelled her to write her poem, America the Beautiful. Though several exist, the final version of the poem was set to a hymn and has become the anthem we all know. Cheyenne Lodge, set against the backdrop of Cheyenne Mountain, affords breathtaking views of Colorado Springs and the Pikes Peak region. Join us and take in the grandeur that inspired Katharine.
