A Conversation with Alan Dershowitz

Harvard Law School Professor Emeritus Alan Dershowitz is one of the most prominent and controversial lawyers in the country, and indeed has been called “the best known criminal defense lawyer in the world.” His clients have included Bill Clinton, O.J. Simpson, Claus von Bülow, Julian Assange, Mia Farrow, Jeffrey MacDonald, and Patty Hearst, along with world leaders and many more. He appears regularly in the media, has written books on a wide range of topics, and speaks to audiences around the world. Recently, he has been a strong voice against the notion that universities should have any “safe spaces” when it comes to ideas and has argued for the due process rights of college students accused of sexual or other misconduct. Rick Simpson, who represented Prof. Dershowitz in a recent highly publicized defamation case, will interview the Professor about his life in the law, including the ethical and professional challenges he has confronted.

Alan M. Dershowitz, Professor of Law, Emeritus, Harvard Law School, Cambridge, MA

Future Trends Impacting the Legal Profession, Delivery of Legal Services, and Related Liabilities

Do trends in the manner in which legal services are provided in Canada, Washington State, and perhaps other jurisdictions (both traditionally and non-traditionally), predict broader change for the delivery of legal services in the United States? Will “access to justice” concerns accelerate the pace of change? How will the aging lawyer population impact these trends? Moreover, what impact might these changes have on the legal malpractice environment – for traditional law firms, non-traditional legal service delivery systems, and the carriers insuring same? Join our speakers of diverse professional perspectives from both the U.S. and Canada who will explore these and other questions to help reveal the future of the delivery of legal services and its effect on the professional liability field.

YOUNG PROFESSIONALS SESSION:

Did You Call Your Client a Crook? Would You Like to See the Email in a Book? Would You Like to See a Judge Reading it on a Nook?

It can take less than a second to fire off an email that could later come back to haunt you. When reporting to an insurer about your client, perhaps you describe them more colorfully than you would if the client was copied on the correspondence. Or, what if you say something off-color or about your client in an internal email communication? Take for example the emails produced in connection with a suit instituted by a firm for fees, in which lawyers were joking about how they should “churn that bill, baby” and that the bill was wildly over budget, or, the emails produced in a suit against another law firm which resulted in a $200 million verdict, which depicted the lawyers making fun of their client. These simple emails, which would be arguably protected by the attorney-client privilege in the suit you are defending or prosecuting, would be discoverable in a subsequent legal malpractice case, insurer audit, or in a number of other scenarios. This panel will discuss when something should be documented or when it should be simply said over the phone, giving practical advice to use in your daily practice.

SoJin Bae, Equity Partner, Mendes & Mount LLP, New York, NY

BREAKOUT 2

A Shift in the Balance Of Power: Counsel Indemnifying Clients

As competition in the legal marketplace continues to increase, so do clients’ demands upon their potential counsel. More and more clients are turning to outside counsel guidelines ("OCGs") to shape their relationships, and these guidelines are significantly impacting the attorney-client relationship and the risk counsel agrees to take to secure a lucrative client. Learn from this panel of experts as they examine OCGs, highlighting their indemnity provisions and how they impact upon the attorney-client relationship and the potential for insurance coverage. The panel will also discuss claims brought under indemnity provisions.

Case Law Developments

This session is your opportunity to immerse yourself in a survey of new decisions that impact lawyers professional liability landscape. The panel will synthesize and interpret the hottest new cases in lawyers liability, including, among other topics, examination of recent cases relating to whether legal malpractice claims may be pursued by assignment, subrogation, or as third party beneficiary. Expect audience participation as the panel introduces and discusses the broader meaning of important recent decisions in a lively discussion that will help keep you on top of national developments in the law.

State of the Insurance Market

What does the future hold for the LPL market in the face of big changes in the federal government, Brexit, volatile stock and bond markets, aging lawyers and law firms, and new forms of practice? Our expert panel will address the market’s prospects, from NABRICO, to program law, to Big Law, to reinsurance and beyond. Those who don’t learn from history are doomed to repeat it. Our panel will bring historical perspective and help you gaze into the future of the lawyers’ professional liability insurance market.

Beware the Intoxicating Attraction of State- Authorized Medical (or Recreational) Marijuana

The ever-expanding state approval of the sale and/or use of medical marijuana, and in some cases recreational sale or use thereof, create new opportunities for attorneys in advising clients who seek to do business in what once was a purely illegal trade. However, the conflict between these states’ laws and regulations and those imposed by the federal government create not only potential problems for prospective entrepreneurs, but may also pose moral and ethical dilemmas for attorneys—and, if not managed appropriately, legal malpractice exposures. Learn from this expert panel how you, your clients, and your insureds, can avoid problems when operating in this area of conflict between state and federal law.

When Life Happens, We Are Our Partner’s Keeper

Life doesn’t always go as planned. Some will struggle with an addiction, be it gambling, alcohol, or prescription medication. Others will deal with mental health issues such as chronic depression. Then, of course, there are the challenges that can come with age, including dementia and terminal illness just for starters. This program will explore the ethical and malpractice concerns that can arise as a result of life happening to those with whom we are in practice because, aware of it or not, when practicing in a firm you are your partner’s keeper. The program will also explore the other side of the story, addressing the issues from the standpoint of lawyers whose competency has been questioned (sometimes unfairly) and the defense counsel retained to represent them. Our panel of experts will provide guidance when navigating these often difficult issues.

Barbara Bowe, LICSW, Lawyers Concerned for Lawyers Massachusetts, Boston, MA
Mike Frederickson, General Counsel, Massachusetts Board of Bar Overseers, Boston, MA

Data Security Risk Assessments: The Gold of Due Diligence

In the wake of large-scale data breaches impacting every industry, businesses and even government agencies have been making significant strides to protect the confidential and personal information of clients and employees. Corporations, whether as required by regulations or by being proactive on their own, are performing their own internal risk assessments in order to understand and identify their cybersecurity risk in relation to organizational operations, organizational assets, and individuals. These assessments are “the gold of due diligence,” but undertaking an internal risk assessment raises questions about its discoverability in subsequent litigation, or whether the information contained within these reports is protected by the attorney-client privilege and work product doctrine. To answer these and other concerns, our panel will discuss the steps that in-house and/or outside counsel must take to protect these highly sensitive documents from disclosure as the law in this emerging area develops.

Succession Planning: How to Hand Your Firm to the Next Generation of Lawyers

With baby boomer lawyers beginning to wind down their legal careers, the industry faces unprecedented change in leadership for which it is arguably ill-prepared. Taking the time to develop an over-arching transition vision and strategy often takes a backseat to day-to-day operational issues. However, law firms need to plan for turnover years in advance, and start by gauging the immediacy of their individual firms’ needs. There are many activities your firm can implement to facilitate the eventual changes in leadership. This session will outline some of the effective long-term strategies for succession planning including partner roles and responsibilities, leadership development, compensation, and retirement.

PLENARY SESSION 3
The Increasingly Dangerous Role of Conflicts of Interest

This session will examine recent developments and recurring challenges posed by conflicts of interest in the context of lawyers’ professional liability, including the difficulties that conflicts present when defending LPL claims. A conflict allegation can turn a simple vanilla malpractice case into a serious matter, aggravating compensatory damage exposure and potentially implicating punitive damages. Common sources of conflicts will be examined, such as accidental clients, former and seemingly former clients, joint representation conflicts, conflicts arising out of lawyer mobility, and conflicts arising out of firms’ litigation of their own work. Our panel of experts will also consider the defensive options that are available when a conflict arguably exists, and loss prevention strategies for avoiding or mitigating conflicts in the first place.

Douglas Richmond, Managing Director, Professional Services, Aon, Chicago, IL
Anne E. Thar, Deputy General Counsel, Conflicts & New Business, Sidley Austin LLP, Chicago, IL

PLENARY 4
The First Thing We Do, Let’s %$! All the Lawyers: How to Pick a Jury in a Legal Malpractice Case

If you are looking for tips and considerations when dealing with potentially strong—and possibly negative—beliefs that prospective jurors have about lawyers, our panel of experts has what you are looking for. This program will highlight the issues relating to jury selection in legal malpractice cases, challenges that both plaintiff’s and defense lawyers face in dealing with juror biases and preconceptions about the legal profession, and how to deal with those issues during the jury selection process. From this session, you will learn about the challenges lawyers as defendants face with respect to jury pool opinions about the legal profession, and gain tips from a professional jury consultant on how LPL trial lawyers (plaintiffs and defense counsel) can employ strategies to deal with certain biases and preconceptions about the profession. The plaintiff’s bar as well as defense counsel and LPL insurers will benefit from this in-depth examination of jury pool considerations in legal malpractice cases.
