Marion “Emmy” Betz, MD, MPH is a board-certified emergency physician who works clinically at the University of Colorado Hospital Emergency Department (ED) and also conducts research in injury epidemiology and prevention. She is currently an Associate Professor of Emergency Medicine at the University of Colorado School of Medicine. Dr. Betz’s areas of research expertise are "lethal means safety" (i.e., limiting access to guns and other lethal methods for those who are suicidal) and care of suicidal patients in EDs. She has worked with numerous organizations on issues of suicide prevention, including the Colorado Suicide Prevention Commission, the Suicide Prevention Resource Center, and the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention. She co-founded and leads the Colorado Firearm Safety Coalition, a collaborative effort between public health and medical professionals and firearm retailers to reduce firearm suicides. Her prior work has included publications and presentations related to ED provider attitudes towards lethal means restriction for suicide prevention, suicidality among older adults, public opinion about firearm safety discussions, and strategies for enhancing provider-patient communication about sensitive topics, and in 2015 she gave a TEDxMileHigh talk on firearm suicide.

Andrew Gurman, MD, is the 171st President of the American Medical Association. Prior to becoming AMA President in June 2016, Dr. Gurman was an active and highly visible member of the AMA Board of Trustees, and both speaker and vice speaker of the AMA House of Delegates. In addition to being a past president of the Blair County Medical Society in Pennsylvania, Dr. Gurman’s distinguished record includes past service as a vice speaker and then speaker of the Pennsylvania Medical Society House of Delegates, and as a two-time chair of the Pennsylvania Medical Society’s Political Action Committee.

Linda Klein is the President of the American Bar Association, and the senior managing shareholder at Baker Donelson Bearman Caldwell & Berkowitz. She has served as chair of the ABA’s House of Delegates, the chair of the Tort Trial and Insurance Practice Section, chair of the Committee on Rules and Calendar of the House of Delegates, chair of the Coalition for Justice, and chair of ABA Day, the Association’s Congressional outreach effort. In June 1997, she became the first woman to serve as president of the State Bar of Georgia. Klein’s practice, based in Atlanta, includes most types of business dispute resolution, including contract law, employment law, and professional liability.
Jonathan Lowy is the Director of the Legal Action Project at the Brady Center to Prevent Gun Violence. For over 19 years Jon has litigated in appellate and trial courts in over 30 states, winning numerous cases that reform dangerous gun industry practices, defend reasonable gun laws, and challenge gun lobby-backed laws that place Americans at risk. Mr. Lowy has been named one of the nation’s top 500 leading lawyers by Lawdragon magazine every year since 2012, and was recognized with the Child Health Advocate Award by the American Academy of Pediatrics in 2015. He is the author of several articles on firearms issues, including the forthcoming “The Right Not To Be Shot: Public Safety, Private Guns, and The Constellation of Constitutional Liberties,” and he discusses firearms issues extensively in the media. He graduated from Harvard College and the University of Virginia School of Law.

Darrell Miller focuses his scholarship and teaching on issues concerning civil rights, constitutional law, civil procedure, state and local government law, and legal history. His scholarship appears in prominent law reviews such as the Yale Law Journal, the Columbia Law Review, the University of Chicago Law Review and the New York University Law Review. Before entering the legal academy, Miller spent five years litigating complex and appellate matters with a large law firm in Columbus, Ohio. Prior to that, he clerked for Judge R. Guy Cole, Jr. of the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit. Miller attended Harvard Law School where he graduated cum laude and served as a Notes Editor for the Harvard Law Review. In addition to his law degree, Miller holds degrees from Oxford University, where he studied Modern History and English as a British Marshall Scholar, and from Anderson University.

Harold Pollack is the Helen Ross Professor at the University of Chicago School of Social Service Administration. He is co-director of the University of Chicago Crime Lab and a committee member of the Center for Health Administration Studies at the University of Chicago. He has published widely at the interface between poverty policy and public health. His research appears in such journals as Addiction, Journal of the American Medical Association, American Journal of Public Health, Health Services Research, Pediatrics, and Social Service Review. Before coming to SSA, Professor Pollack was a Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Scholar in Health Policy Research at Yale University and taught Health Management and Policy at the University of Michigan School of Public Health.
Megan Ranney is an Associate Professor in the Department of Emergency Medicine at Rhode Island Hospital/Alpert Medical School of Brown University. She is the Director and Founder of the Brown Emergency Digital Health Innovation program (www.brownedhi.org), as well as Director of Special Projects in the Department of Emergency Medicine. She is a core researcher in the Injury Prevention Center of Rhode Island Hospital. She has a secondary appointment in the Department of Health Services, Policy, and Practice at the Brown School of Public Health. Dr. Ranney’s career focus is on developing, testing, and disseminating digital health interventions for high-risk emergency department patients. She also has a long history of research and national leadership on violence prevention, particularly firearm violence. She is currently Principal Investigator or Co-Investigator on 6 federally funded grants and has over 70 peer-reviewed publications, most focused on digital health interventions for patients with a history of violence.

Kaveri Vaid is a litigation associate at Paul, Weiss. She is the lead associate on a pro bono gun violence prevention initiative. In addition, her practice involves white collar criminal defense and complex civil litigation. She has a JD and an LLM in International Law from New York University School of Law, an MA in Political Science from Columbia University, and a BA in English from Williams College. Prior to law school, Kaveri was a grantmaker at Carnegie Corporation of New York and a Teach for America teacher in New Orleans.

Nina Vinik manages Joyce Foundation’s grant making in support of evidence-based policies and practices to reduce gun deaths and injuries in the United States. Under Nina’s direction, Joyce has funded some of the nation’s most significant research into the impact of state prevention strategies. She also has focused on developing broad stakeholder coalitions to advocate for common sense gun laws to keep our communities safe. Prior to joining the foundation in 2008, Nina, an attorney, served as Legal Director of Legal Community Against Violence (LCAV), a non-profit organization providing legal and technical assistance in support of gun violence prevention policy efforts nationwide. Her other experience includes serving as Director of the Litigation Assistance Partnership Project of the American Bar Association’s Section of Litigation, Fair Housing Project Director of the Chicago Lawyers’ Committee for Civil Rights Under Law, Inc., and Legal Director of the ACLU Foundation of Florida, Inc.
Daniel Webster is Professor of Health Policy and Management at the Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health. Dr. Webster is Director of the Johns Hopkins Center for Gun Policy and Research, Deputy Director for Research for the Johns Hopkins Center for the Prevention of Youth Violence, and core faculty of the Johns Hopkins Center for Injury Research and Policy. He holds a joint appointment as Professor in the School of Education's Division of Public Safety Leadership at Johns Hopkins. Dr. Webster is one of the nation’s leading experts on firearm policy and the prevention of gun violence. He is co-editor of Reducing Gun Violence in America: Informing Policy with Evidence and Analysis (JHU Press, 2013) He has published numerous articles on firearm policy, youth gun acquisition and carrying, the prevention of gun violence, intimate partner violence, and adolescent violence prevention. He has studied the effects of a variety of violence prevention interventions including state firearm and alcohol policies, policing strategies, street outreach and conflict mediation, public education campaigns, and school-based curricula.