Full Bio:

Diana Flynn serves as Chief of the Appellate Section of the United States Department of Justice’s Civil Rights Division. In this capacity, she is responsible for direction and management of the Civil Rights Division's appellate litigation and legal counsel program. Ms. Flynn is a recipient of the Attorney General’s Distinguished Service Award for exceptional work in connection with the Supreme Court litigation that led to marriage equality; the Attorney General’s John Marshall Award for Legal Counsel (the department’s highest honor for that specialized area of practice); the Assistant Attorney General’s Award for Distinguished Service in the Civil Rights Division; the DOJ Pride’s James R. Douglass Award for contributions to the work-life environment of the department’s LGBT employees; and SOGI’s Stonewall Award for lifetime achievement in advocacy of LGBT rights. She has been a frequent speaker on civil rights law, the Supreme Court, and the work of the Department of Justice, including at White House briefings and events. A graduate of the Yale Law School and a summa cum laude graduate of the University of Rochester, Flynn is licensed to practice law in the United States Supreme Court, the State of New York, the District of Columbia, all circuits of the United States Court of Appeals, and several other courts.
