

ABA Membership – more benefits at a reduced rate!

The American Bar Association understands the unique challenges that many lawyers are facing these days. We want to be sure that every attorney has access to the tools, resources and benefits they need to succeed.

New special dues rates have been established for:

- Government attorneys
- Judges
- Legal aid attorneys
- Solo practitioners in private practice

Under these special rates, a lawyer admitted to the bar from one to four years will pay $100, from four to six years $125, from six to ten years $145, and over ten years $225.

The ABA is also introducing new flexible payment options including installment billing, and is developing new tools and resources to help lawyers in their day-to-day practice.

A note from the ABA House of Delegates...

At the ABA Midyear meeting in February 2010, the House of Delegates approved a proposal from the Standing Committee on Membership to retool the ABA dues structure. The new tiered structure reduces dues for solo practitioners, government lawyers, lawyers employed by nonprofit legal services programs and judges. The new rates take effect for the 2010-2011 membership year beginning September 1, 2010, and will allow even more lawyers to access the vast resources of the ABA.
