About the ABA International

Established in 1878, the American Bar Association Section of International Law (ABA International) is the leader in the development of policy in the international arena, the promotion of the rule of law, and the education of international law practitioners. ABA International is also the only ABA entity that focuses on the full range of international legal issues and is involved in a wide variety of substantive legal activities.

ABA International serves over 23,000 members. In addition to private practitioners, the Section's members include approximately 1,500 in-house counsel, over 800 U.S. lawyers living abroad, and more than 1,000 non-U.S. lawyers in 88 countries. The Section of International Law is the ABA home for many of the world's leading international lawyers and serves as the ABA's forum for the discussion of current and emerging issues in international law. ABA International serves its members with a wide range of resources, from seasonal meetings such as the Annual, Midyear, Spring, and Fall Meetings, to CLE teleconferences and cutting-edge publications, more than 60 special interest and regional committees, and much more.
