

PRIVACY AND NATIONAL SECURITY IN A NETWORKED WORLD

Is It Time To Reconsider Privacy Rights in Third Party Records?

Sheraton New York
New York Ballroom East, 3rd Floor
Saturday, August 9, 2008
10:30 a.m. to 12:00 p.m.

In an era of data mining, where third party records can be accumulated and mined to produce a very detailed picture of one's daily life, does the reasoning of landmark Supreme Court decisions defining the "third party doctrine" in privacy law still apply? Join our debate, featuring

ORIN KERR, Professor, The George Washington University Law School and

GREGORY NOJEIM, Senior Counsel and Director of the Project on Freedom, Security and Technology at the Center for Democracy and Technology

MODERATED BY

Suzanne Spaulding, Principal, Bingham Consulting Group

Cosponsored by the ABA Standing Committee on Law and National Security, Standing Committee on Public Education, Government and Public Sector Lawyers Division, Criminal Justice Section, Section of Individual Rights & Responsibilities, and Section of Science & Technology Law
