NEWS

ABA Adopts New Model Court Rule on Insurance Disclosure

On August 9, 2004, the American Bar Association House of Delegates adopted the ABA Model Court Rule on Insurance Disclosure. Twelve jurisdictions have already addressed the rule, which requires lawyers to disclose on their annual registration statements whether they maintain professional liability insurance.

The rule further suggests that

- the information submitted by lawyers be made available by means designated by your court. (For example, in Virginia, information regarding a lawyer’s professional liability insurance can be accessed on the state bar’s Web site.)

- the bar or lawyer regulatory agency educate the public about the nature of legal malpractice insurance to address concern that the public would not understand that “claims made” policies do not cover dishonesty or other intentional acts, and that such a policy may no longer be in force when a claim is made.

RESOURCES

Strengthen Your Assistance Programs with the ABA’s Career Resource Center
Did you know that your assistance programs can benefit from the work of the ABA Career Resource Center? The Oregon Attorney Assistance Program (OAAP) worked with the center this September to deliver relevant career programming.

The OAAP invited attorneys from the state to attend a half-day seminar led by Center Director Kathy Morris and titled “Taking Control of Your Career.”

The program consisted of three segments on career management and two networking breaks. Each registrant received a copy of the ABA Career Resource Center publication Objection Overruled: Overcoming Obstacles in the Lawyer Job Search, as well as specially created handouts on setting and attaining career goals.

Barbara S. Fishleder, OAAP Executive Director, said of the program, “Your presentation was clear, interesting, and motivating.”

If your assistance-providing unit would be interested in staging such an event to provide inspiration and information, and to showcase the local legal community, please contact the center at (312) 988-6215 or careers@abanet.org. The center will assist in the planning and preparation, and take an active part in the seminar itself.
