

Family Advocate, Spring 2005

Be sure to check your mail in mid-April for the latest issue of the Family Advocate, which covers a developing area of family law – Domestic Torts. As with any developing field, rights and remedies have not yet been fully defined and this issue explores these issues in depth.

Focusing on the present state of domestic tort law and its emerging developments, it is a must-read for every family law attorney. Articles cover a range of actions from cybersnooping and custodial interference to third-party blame and RICO claims.

The issue is scheduled to mail April 15th.
